Debris Covers Dead, Dying as Rescuers Feverishly Work to Save Victims; Eight Identified; Extent of Washington Horror Yet Unknown.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH).

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Evening Star's latest estimate of casualties at 12:45 this morning (Sunday) is between thirty-five and forty dead and 140 injured. At that hour a report from the scene stated that seventeen bodies had been brought out and others had been located. A fireman stated that the bodies of five other dead were known to be pinned under the debris. Policemen and firemen expressed the opinion that the total dead might go as high as sixty or seventy-five.

IN THE HEART OF FASHIONABLE SECTION.
(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Fifteen persons at least are believed to have been killed and scores injured tonight in the collapse under the weight of two feet of snow of the roof of the Knickerbocker Theater, a motion-picture house located in the heart of Washington's fashionable northwest section.

Two hours and a half after the crash, which occurred about 9 o'clock, definite information as to the number of dead and injured was wholly lacking as well as estimates of the number of those in the theater at the time, these estimates ranging from 150 to 500, although the theater, one of the finest motion-picture houses in the city, had accommodations for more than

Captive as Reason for Attempted Crime.

Hated for nonunion railroad men, whom he called "scabs," was given yesterday by Walter E. ### Shantung Settlement Awaits Result of Harding Mediation; Expect Plenary Session Soon.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The Shantung tie-up at Washington's near-bizarr combined to block again Arm Conference progress today, but the delay did not dim prevailing confidence that all the conference issues soon would be carried forward. So far as Shantung was concerned, it was a day of waiting for the mediatory effort of President Harding to have its effect at Peking and Tokio.

ALL indications pointed to a decision early next week, and all delegates appeared confident that the decision would be for a settlement along the lines of the compromise supported by the Presi-

MEETINGS CANCELED
Both meetings planned for today were canceled because of the storm. One meeting was to have brought the Japanese and Chinese delegations to discuss the "Twenty-one demands" and other, proposed questions.

There was a postponed session of the subcommittee considering the Chinese Eastern Railway. At the meeting, it was explained, was merely to have put into treaty language the agreements already reached. In some conference circles there was a feeling that if Shantung is returned to China, many of the objectionable features of the demands program already will have been removed. It is not expected that the Chinese will insist that the agreement be taken on the subject of affirming the right of the Chinese to be in the work of rescue, volunteers assisting the French, policemen and marines without regard to the nationality of the personnel. ## STARVATION OF CHILDREN TOLD.

Near-East Director Gives First-Hand Facts.

Grossing Sights Reported in Famine Area.

Babies With and Die for Want of Bread.

With practically no food because of crop failures and general chaotic conditions, Armenia, Russia and all Near East nations are face to face with starvation. This information is based upon reports from authorized statements of men in the United States who have visited the stricken countries, and speak from first-hand observation.

The Near East Relief organization has already afforded a measure of relief and saved fully 1,000,000 starving children of the Bible lands, but a correct assessment of the situation shows that until there is a return to a normal economic status constant aid must be furnished for some time.

Nearly all relief now being rendered, it is said, is to the children of the Near East nations, and although the people of the United States have responded to the call for aid, there must be continued assistance if the situation is to be met, as the funds now available are not nearly sufficient.

STARVING TO DEATH.

E. Guy Talbot, regional director of the Pacific Coast of the Near East Relief organization, who will speak this morning at the Wilshire Boulevard Methodist Episcopal Church, has appealed to the district to do its share in contributing to the relief of the famine-stricken children of the Near East.

Talbot recently traveled 20,000 miles in a three-month trip to Turkey and Russia to inspect the work of the Near East Relief and reported that the published stories of the awful sufferings have not been exaggerated.

An indicative of the almost unbelievable state of affairs in the Near East, it is reported that in one section of Armenia 20,000 children are being cared for, and that before the winter had ended fully that many more must be supplied with sufficient food to keep them alive.

In an orphanage in Alexandropol, 300 children out of 10,000 died of starvation and malnutrition, reported Talbot. "God only knows how many thousands died outside the orphanage, for there was absolutely no food in that land of midnight horror and despair."

It is not an uncommon sight, so it is reported, to see men, women and children drop dead as a result of starvation, and every day the dead walk makes grotesque roads of Alexandropol. Mr. Talbot stated that "it was impossible to walk through the streets without stumbling over dead bodies. Death met you at every turn. But, death, says starvation, is not so terrible as to look into the pinched, wasted faces of famished, perishing little children, slowly dying for want of a crust of bread."

"But if we thought despair could be no deeper and scenes of horror could be no blacker, we were soon to have a rude awakening. As I lay sick in my box car on a siding at Erzurum, while other members of our party were away visiting the hospitals, orphanages and other relief stations, I watched a constant stream of famished, ragged, starving refugees. They were going somewhere, I knew where, in search of food. They were all old men and women and little children. I saw no young men in that land of despair, except the men in the Red Army. The other young men had been shot. I saw no young women; they had all been sold into worse than slavery into the Turkish harem."

PRIEST, SHOT BY BURGLAR, DIES.

Attempted Theft of Sacramental Wine Causes Murder.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The Rev. Father Florian Chodowicz, pastor of the St. Pieter's Roman Catholic Church, who was shot yesterday morning by a burglar who attempted to steal a few quarts of sacramental wine, died last night in St. Mary's hospital from loss of blood. The burglar escaped.

As I watched this terrible procession passing my car door, every now and then one would fall by the roadside, dead of starvation. Scores of them fell in crumpled heaps before my eyes."

EAT DRY GRASS.

The sight of little children eating dry grass and roots to stave off certain death by no means is a new sight, it is officially reported. "We found little children eating bones at Erzurum, with the eyes of God looking down," reports Mr. Talbot. "These children said they got the bones yonder in the churchyard. We discovered, on investigation, that the bones were human bones that these children had dug from human graves. They were starving."

"I can never blot from my memory the awful terror and despair I saw depicted on the faces of a hundred starving tots before the gates of one of the orphanages in Erzurum. Within the orphanage there were several hundred happy, contented little ones, alive and well because of American generosity. Without the door we counted more than 100 thin bodies almost naked, covered with sores, holding up little hands and saying, 'Give us food, give us food, give us food.' They were pleading to be taken in and begging for a crust of bread. They had wandered from the hills and deserted villages roundabout where they had lived like hunted animals. Their little faces were pinched and hollow like death masks, and their pious pleading eyes held all the terror and despair of the ages. But they could not be taken in and there was no bread. And the mother called 'The Eye of God' looked down, looked down, and Ararat, the Mount of Promise, looked down, looked down, and the children starved to death."

Hundreds of thousands of starving children in the Near East are still clamoring for food, and they look to the United States for aid, in the latest report from the famine land. Because of the gigantic undertaking of the Near East Relief organization, additional funds are a necessity at this time, and each district in the United States has been called upon to contribute liberally to the end that some measure of relief may be given to the starving children of Near East nations.

Wounded Captive Tells Why He Attempted Crime.

Mother Visits Prisoner in Receiving Hospital.

Glad Nine Passengers Were Not Harled Into Ditch.

When he had visited her and had Christmas dinner with her. Then he was jolly, laughing, overgrown boy—her "baby." Yesterday he was swathed in bandages on a hospital cot, accused of one of the most heinous plots imaginable.

Lambertson wept when his mother entered. She did not shed a tear, hummed him, patted his head. He called her "sweetheart." She called him "baby."

In the presence of his mother Lambertson denied he is an I.W.O. or that he has a prison record. He blamed his actions on misfortune, admitting he had plotted to wreck the train.

"Yes, baby," she told him. "If you had been working it would not have happened."

RAILROAD MEN'S FAMILY.

Mrs. Lambertson said she was the youngest of her five children, four boys and one daughter. All the boys, like their father, were railroad men. William, the oldest was a baggage man when he was killed by a train several years ago.

Emmett is a yardmaster for the Santa Fe at Joliet, Ill. George is a conductor on the Burlington Route in Iowa. The family home is at Ames, Iowa. The father died a year ago. The sister resides in Los Angeles, but at present is somewhere in the mountains.

The prisoner and his mother talked of his wife, Della Chafin. He said he had married her in May, 1929, that she was now in Las Vegas, Nev., working as a waitress in the Union Pacific lunch room to save enough money to send for him. Then he was going to try to seek employment there.

"The last time I saw him was on Christmas day," said Mrs. Lambertson. "Since then I had written to him and had been sending him money."

Lambertson groined blindly for his mother's hand, found it, and pressed it. She stroked his brow and he smiled faintly.

PROMISES TO RETURN.

Then she said she was going, would return tomorrow.

"Please do, sweetheart," he said. She leaned over and kissed him on a cheek, burned with gunpowder. He wrapped his arm around her frail body and patted her feebly on the back. She had not shed a tear. Outside his cell, she walked into a corner and wept. Before she had left the hospital she was crying hysterically. But her "baby," accused of attempting to wreck a train, had not even her cry.

LAMBERTSON UNKNOWN.

Centralia officers informed the local police department they had never before heard of Walter E. Lambertson, though they stated he may be known to them as Jack Davis, who is being sought through the Northwest in connection with the Armistice Day crime.

U. S. Marshal Shannon, stated that a Walter Lambertson was convicted of implication in "Tobacco" atrocities and was sentenced a few years ago to Leavenworth prison. He added that the man now held could not be the same Lambertson for Walter Lambertson is now serving a twenty-year sentence in the prison. Because of the similarity of the names, it is believed here that the prisoner held at Centralia, which failed to identify him with that crime.

Drug Addicts Use Pigeons to Get Dope.

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.) CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Drug addicts who are forced to use extortionate prices for their "dope" are also paying for the training and services of a large number of carrier pigeons, which are being utilized to carry the stuff to Chicago from Canada. Only a small quantity can be attached to the neck of the bird. It is wrapped in oil silk and then placed in an aluminum container.

There is more dope in Chicago right now than ever before," said Alfred Controy, an addict, to Capt. John Rodde, narcotic expert in the United States District Attorney's office. Controy said he had been an addict for five years. He begged the government to place him in some institution where he could be cured, so he could return to his mother in Michigan.

Controy told of the large flocks of carrier pigeons being used in this trade. He said they are released on the Canadian border so that they will arrive at their homes in Chicago at such times as not to excite suspicion. The government is investigating his story and looking over carrier pigeon lofts in the city.

will follow that of Mr. Harvey and Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, with Premier Poincare, Monday. It was explained that this is a mere coincidence, as the matter to be discussed by Lord Curzon and Mr. Harvey has no relation to the Genoa conference of Franco-American affairs.

Since Mr. Harvey arrived two days ago, he has insisted to the French press that his call on the French President was purely a diplomatic courtesy only, and that he bears no message from President Harding. In French official circles, however, great importance continues to be placed on this interview. In these circles the belief was expressed that Premier Poincare is likely to deliver a message of the conversion of the French views regarding the Genoa conference and to get further information as to the attitude of Washington.

RUSSIAN VIEWS.

(BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.) MOSCOW, Jan. 27.—Russia is going to Genoa, "on discussion facts and not principles," declared Sokolnikov, acting commissary for finance, in an interview today with the foreign newspaper correspondents. Sokolnikov is the man who in 1917 was allotted the task of nationalizing the private and other banks of Russia.

"If Russia is not given a reconstruction loan we cannot pay her debts," he declared. "The problem of stabilizing Russia's paper rubles is similar to that of the whole of Europe, and it is only possible through the long work of the League of Nations to establish favorable conditions Russia may, in three to five years, reduce the amount of her paper and return to coinage."

"It is not true that Russia's gold reserve is now $20,000,000. It is upwards of 200,000,000 gold rubles, about $10,000,000. Russia is anxious to reduce her expenses, such as maintaining her army, which is costing annually the equivalent of $60,000,000 gold rubles."

"At Genoa we shall ask that war contracts be canceled and that Russian concessions to foreign capital will be safe. If not, then the world situation will be too uncertain for capitalists to invest in Russia."

Governor Backs Traitor Slur Thrown Debs.

(BY A. P. MOUNT WEBB.) INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 28.—Gov. McCray, in a reply made public today to Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, accepted responsibility for remarks in which the Governor was quoted as saying:

troops of Boy Scouts, who stood guard through the night.

NO WARNING GIVEN.

No warning was given as the walls crashed, the roof breaking in on the heads of the audience with a noise like thunder, crushing snobs and occupants as it fell. It was more than an hour before the rescuers, using gas torches to cut through accumulated mass of steel and concrete, reached the section where it was believed most of the dead and injured were.

The roof seemed to rest almost on the floor, scarcely more than a foot and a half separating the lowermost debris and floor level. All of the debris was covered with the snow which had weighed so heavily upon the roof. Standing up through the debris, stark and rigid, were the pillars which supported the balconies and the roof.

The site of the theater, being at the intersection of two or three principal streets, was lighted by the glow of street lights, which a few blocks distant shed a soft glow on the mantle of snow which covered the city.

CROWD BEGS FOR NEWS.

Beyond the lines first established by the police and later taken over by soldiers, thousands gathered.

These beyond the fire lines included men and women known throughout the country—Senators, Representatives and ambassadors, ministers and society leaders.

Numbers of those behind the lines had friends whom they believed to have been in the theater when the crash came, and they appealed to those maintaining the lines either to let them through or give them some idea as to the number of dead or injured.

The same snowfall which caused the collapse of the theater's roof also worked to lessen the number of those in the crash. For the theater, being the only one in that section, usually is filled even to standing room on week-end nights.

Martial Law Proclaimed After Clashes in Nebraska Packers' Row.

(BY A. P. MOUNT WEBB.) NEBRASKA CITY (Nebr.), Jan. 28.—Military authorities were preparing early tonight to put into force martial law proclaimed today by Gov. McKelvie, in the four-mile precinct.

Keary Hill Cemetery bridge, the packing-house district, Greengrove, Edgewood, the water subdivision of four-mile precinct and Nebraska City will be under martial law, military authorities announced. These sections comprise the residence and operating districts of the packing-house workers.

General military headquarters have been established in the Court-house here with Lieut.-Col. R. G. Douglas in command.

Troops began arriving here this afternoon and the last of them arrived tonight. There are about 500 National Guardsmen here tonight.

(BY A. P. MOUNT WEBB.) Without this public opinion no republic can long endure," he said.

He commented on the increasing number of public employees and said:

"The proportion of public employees continues to increase as rapidly as they have in late years and we will, within a reasonable time, witness this phenomenon: our population divided into two classes, those holding public office, a minority it is true, and all others working to support the minority in office. From that condition to the soviet form of government is but a single step."

He declared that the State should be compelled to provide its own funds for purely State needs," and added "the Federal government should appropriate only for those interests which are purely of national concern and clearly within the purposes for which the State was created."

BRITISH GOLFERS AWAIT DECISION ON TITLE PLAY.

Plan to Change Qualifying Rule of Amateur Championship Golf Tournament.
NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Will the Royal and Ancient Golf Committee shelve the new petition which has just been presented to it for a change in the qualifying rules of the amateur championship which would transform the play to almost the exact conditions as now prevail and have prevailed for years in the United States title tourneys? In 1913 Angus Hambro, a noted British golfer, secured many signatures to a petition of this kind looking toward a qualifying round and match play at thirty-six holes, but it was very politely put in a cubbyhole at St. Andrews, and there it rests to this day.

But it will be harder, we should think, for a throw-down of such golfers as the famous Johnny Ball, R. H. Macdonald, Lord Charles Hope, Charles K. Hutchinson, Roger Wethered, W. B. Torrance, Cyril Tooley, Robert Harris, C. G. Aymer, C. C. Hazell, E. W. Hodder and C. C. Manford among others. This list contains the names of almost all the crack golfers of the world in Great Britain, with Mr. Harold Hilton, as well as on that side. It is hardly to be expected that such men will be turned down without some ceremony at least.

YANKS MAY THINK TWICE.
There has been a change in the entrance conditions for the British amateur event. Up to now a player had to be scratch or better or within three strokes of the lowest handicapped man at his club, provided that man was plus 4 or 5, to be eligible to enter. Now it has been ruled that the club secretary will be responsible for all the entries from his club, and that they will be carefully scrutinized by the championship committee. It is expected that club secretaries will be very chary in approving the entries of golfers who do not qualify in every way. The British have a very blunt way of telling a secretary of his mistakes, and this is the best chance in years.

But if the changes which have been suggested by the above-mentioned golf stars are approved then a few golfers from America who may have planned to play in the big event next season will think twice before starting. It is proposed that a qualifying round be played at thirty-six holes with eighteen holes on the first day and eighteen more on the next. This would take care of a field of about 200 and only the first eighty who have the lowest scores will be permitted to continue for the second round. This is modeled somewhat after the plan of the American plan at sixty-four and ties for sixty-fourth place.

A DECISIVE TEST.
But in the case of a tie for thirty-sixth place there is a radical difference between the newly planned British method and our 2 to 1.

EMIL FRISK DEAD.

Towns' Rivalry Causes Athletic Scandal.

DISBARMENT OF STARS
DISCLOSES FRAME-UP.

Approximately $100,000 Bet on
Outcome of Football Game
Between "Ringers."

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The bitter rivalry between two small towns, which became so acute that approximately $100,000 was bet on a football game, was the real cause of the athletic scandal which resulted in disqualification last night of nine University of Illinois athletes and which threatens to reach into Notre Dame University.

A group of citizens of Carlinville, Ill., it was learned tonight, decided last fall financially to "clean out" the rival town of Taylorville, by obtaining ten college stars to play on their football team, and with victory apparently assured, to bet the limit on the annual contest. But Taylorville learned of the plan, obtained nine college stars and not only defeated Carlinville, but is said to have won nearly $50,000 by covering every Carlinville bet made.

Ten Notre Dame players were in the Carlinville line-up, according to statements by citizens, while the nine disqualified Illinois men played on the Taylorville eleven.

DISCLOSED.

In the Carlinville line-up, according to persons associated with the team, were Gus Desch, member of the American Olympic team and world champion 440-yard hurdler, Chester Wynne, selected by some as all-western conference fullback, and John Mohardt, all-American selection of several football writers. All played on the Notre Dame eleven last fall. In 1929 Carlinville was from Taylorville, 10 to 7, at Carlinville, Taylorville school boasted that next year with their team at home there would be a different story.

Several Carlinville people conceived the "safe-betting" idea of filling their line-up with college stars. Overtures were made to Notre Dame men, according to backers of the Carlinville team, and it was agreed to pay the ten men $200 each plus their expenses, the total being $2700.

The persons who arranged the affairs passed the word to their friends to bet the limit. A special train was hired and a band taken to Taylorville. Farmers arranged to join the pilgrimage and in nearly every case a well-filled wallet was taken along.

READY TO WAGER ALL.
Each person who received the confidential information apparently passed it on to another friend, gradually the word spread into Carlinville. At the same time Taylorville received word Carlinville was ready to back its team with the family jewelry if necessary.

Consternation spread through Taylorville at the idea of sending their team against nationally known college players. Then, a little college add.

Quietly the word was passed not to fear Carlinville—that a means of defeating their rivals' plans had been found.

When the time for the game came, a group of Carlinville citizens began checking in one corner of the field. They found their citizens had bet nearly $100,000. In another section some Taylorville citizens reached the same conclusion.

When the Carlinville eleven came on the field the visiting root-ers roared so cheer.

STARS UNDER COVER.
"What are you yelling for? That's the Taylorville team," said a Carlinville woman.

"Oh, no, that's Carlinville," replied a Taylorville policeman.

"I guess I know our boys and not one of these fellows is from Carlinville," indignantly replied the woman.

Taylorville in the first half used its regular home-town team. At the end of the half Taylorville led 7 to 0. Then out on the field trotted nine stars from the University of Illinois. They had been held under cover.

Little Sternaman ran circles around the Carlinville ends. Jack Crangle plunged through the line and Larry Valcise, forward, named for big gains. The game ended with Taylorville winner, 16 to 0, $48,000 to the good and Carlinville out an equal sum.

BOWLERS SELECTED

FOR CHICAGO CLASSIC.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Twenty-four bowlers who will compete in the first annual world's classic

championship tournament here

February 9 to 25, were announced tonight. Each contestant will be obliged to roll 115 games in a series of five-games matches with each of his twenty-seven opponents. A combination of total pins and the number of games will be used to determine the final rating.

The selections announced were mostly from Chicago.

OAKLAND CLUB
NOT FOR SALE.

Los Angeles club more than two decades ago, would like to tutor

the present generation of Angel

twirlers.

Yesterday Hall called on Manager Red Killefer at his home and asked for the position of coach of young pitchers. He desires particularly to teach the underhand delivery used so effectively by Carl

Stays of the Yankees.

Among Hall's former pupils are

Mays, Spider Baum and Bill To-

zer, and no champion of chuckers could offer better recommendations

than the records of these pitchers.

Killefer will pass the matter

along to secure a first-sacker, Killefer had decided to depend on H. Hercules Hyatt again, but may change his mind with the chance to land Koney, as he is known for quick and short.

Koney, while having slowed down some, is still a fair fielder, and always will be a hard hitter

as long as he remains in the game.

He drives a ball with terrific force, and generally on a line, and is believed the type of player who would appeal to President Maier.

Koney is a large athlete, and forward was known as the "Big Train."

The afternoon was featured by a number of upsets, in which several favorites went down to defeat. Miss Dunbar, at a fancy

price, showed her heels to Thrills and Frank Wilson in the opener.

Another long shot got down in front in the third mile and a sixteenth, when Zamloch, closely pressed by Dr. Samuel, beat the favorite, Booneville, which was third.

great in theme, consistent in story, human in characterization and perfect in continuity. "Hail the Woman" represents the highest type of photoplay and is a model for those who are writing for the screen.

"Hail the Woman" was written for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan and marks a new era in photoplay writing. Because of our belief in the future of the original photoplay, we urge every enthusiast to see "Hail the Woman"—once, twice or a dozen times—and study its perfect construction.

Monday evening, January 30, will be "Palmer Night" at the Mission Theater. Our guests, numbering over 100, are going to see and study this screen masterpiece.

Now it is all very well when a homely woman talks like that. Mary is quite a beauty. In the fore, behooves us to believe her story. Mary has been particularly aggressive. As a matter of fact, after Muratore's public statements against her and Mary's long silence, we rather felt the honor was Mary. And now Mary has confirmed the public opinion of Muratore at the expense of her public opinion of herself. But she is a lady, so she will content herself with calling her jealous cat.

Which merely confirms the proverb, "Birds of a feather flock together." "Perfect ladies often find themselves on the same branch with 'no gentlemen'—it's a perfect match."

ARTHUR CAHILL ACCLAIMED A GENIUS BY ART CRITICS.

Paintings Exhibited at California Club Stir Connoisseurs and Lay Appreciators Alike.

BY R. FRED HOGUE.

During the last week the favored few in Los Angeles to whom the portals of the California Club are open have enjoyed the pleasure, unique in Los Angeles, of viewing a collection of the new celebrated portraits from the brush of Arthur Cahill, a native son, whose canvases exhibited in Washington and New York last year created a sensation in eastern art circles.

His portrait of Gen. Pershing in field uniform was pronounced by connoisseurs and art critics to be the best canvas of the year. It gave to his art entree into the most exclusive circles of Washington and New York, including the White House; while that of Mrs. U. S. Grant, Jr., in evening gown, gave him renown as a painter of beautiful women that brought him more commissions in a week than he could execute in two years.

Cahill has swept aside, almost with a single flourish of his brush, the prejudice that no great artist could come out of the West. He has confuted the dogma that achievement as a painter one must devote several years of his life to an apprenticeship in the art schools of Southern Europe.

His canvases have done more perhaps than those of any other master to turn the eyes of the art world to the Pacific Coast. He has refused to be the present to leave California, by reason of his mother's failing health, one of the society favorites of Paris and London is coming all the way to Los Angeles to sit for a portrait.

When an artist can play the part of the mountain in place of the customary role of Mahomet, it is conclusive evidence that he has arrived.

GREAT PERSHING CANVAS.
When I first saw his portrait of Gen. Pershing I knew nothing of Cahill's art affiliations. The handling of the light and shade, the strong, but subdued tints and the character delineation brought to my mind Raphael's portrait of Pope Leo X and I concluded that he was under the influence of the great genius of beauty of the Renaissance period.

But when I spoke to him of Raphael as a colorist he looked at me with a naive smile and replied: "I cannot discuss the work of Raphael from personal observation, for I never saw a Raphael original in my life."

"Then you have never been abroad," I said.
"Not farther than New York." I looked at his canvas with renewed interest. Here was an artist whose composition and character delineation was strongly reminiscent of the Renaissance, and yet who had never made a pilgrimage to Italy.

Happily I recalled an old French maxim, "Tell me what you like and I will tell you what you are." So I asked him what he considered the most remarkable canvas he had ever seen.
"Presumably he launched into an enthusiastic description of the portrait of an old woman by Rembrandt that hangs in the Metropolitan Museum of New York. He said he had sat for hours before that picture and that he had made unfinished copies of it half a dozen times.

I felt I was now in the track of the warm, luminous background, the dramatic contrasts of light and shade, the chiaroscuro and the subtle color of his serious portraits. For every art must have a beginning. Nothing is invented.

OVERCOMES OBSTACLES.
As I studied the canvases closer I was impressed with his marvelous power of expression. The pictures were not mere portraits, studies in composition, color and light effects. The artist within seemed to radiate from the canvas. I began to understand something of the God-given talent that had enabled this boy with a crippled arm to overcome a thousand obstacles and rise to his present position of eminence in the art world.

I recalled something written by St. Francis of Assisi 700 years ago for his brother monks: "Wherever we travel we have always our cell with us; for our brother the body is our cell and our soul is the spirit that abides within."

Arthur Cahill was born with that rare talent which enables him whenever he paints a portrait to open the window of the cell and permit one to view the hermit at his shrine.
John Ruskin would say it is due to birth and early environment. But Cahill's canvas is being to mind those of the great Dutch artists of the seventeenth century. He was born in San Francisco and lived on the shore, in the midst of fog like those of Holland, and this gave him his impulse toward painting interiors, causing him to avoid the sunlight. Had the storm dropped him in Los Angeles he would have posed his subjects in the open, there would be splashes of sunlight trickling through the foliage and his backgrounds would be vistas of southern landscapes.

Prenatal influence sets its stamp unmistakably on the forehead of genius.

CREATIVE TYPES.
In all his portraits Cahill treats his subject in what artists term a genre manner. Genre is a term applied to a type. Its relation to an individual portrait is that of a common to a proper noun. The picture of a soldier painted from an unknown model would be genre painting; one of Gen. Pershing would be a portrait.

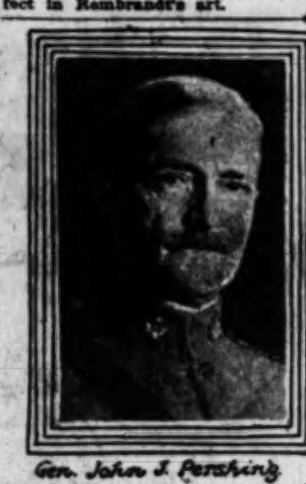

In his humoresque Cahill paints a genre picture from a known model. The portrait is at once a likeness and a type.

His canvas of Dr. Stewart of the Bohemian Club of San Francisco is more than a portrait. In addition to being an excellent individual likeness one senses radiating from it the spirit of kindly good fellowship for which the Bohemian Club is famous.

A strong light coming from above strikes full in the face a man rather corpulent and of middle age. His blue eyes twinkle with good humor, but not with merriment. The lips seem to be twitching under the mustache and the nostrils palpitate. His left hand rests upon the vest that covers a prominent bay window and between the thumb and finger he twirls the stump of a partly consumed cigar. This pose is that of one who relaxes unconsciously while standing at the club; that all is well with him and the world; that he has just heard a good story from a fellow Bohemian and that the lips are parting to respond in kind.

It is a picture of complacent old age, of one who has mellowed like a ripening golden apple. To one who views that canvas the decline of life can have no terror. It is a Rembrandt without the sombre gloom that to me is always a defect in Rembrandt's art.

Gen. John J. Pershing.

Like most of Cahill's canvases it is an interior setting, the figure thrown out in sharp contrast from a warm, vibrant black background. The face is aglow with light and color, while breast and lower part of the figure disappear in the encroaching shade. Every feature is sketched full on the canvas with a sure and vigorous stroke. Warm reds and browns melt into evanescent ambers.

The face is strong without being hard and the expression is kindly but not weak, placid without over a suggestion of sentimentality. To me it represents the ultimate triumph in the art of portraiture: for the effect is one that I have never seen in the canvases of any other master. It is one of the few treasures of art collected by the Bohemian Club that is without reproach. The artist's hand and spirit seem so truly and graphically portrayed.

As time passes it will grow in value. It is very likely that, a hundred years hence, that single canvas will be worth more than the club building and the lot on which it stands.
This humoresque reflects the artist in his lightest and best mood. Dull care have been banished, alike from the subject and the painter. A close inspection of the canvas discloses a touch of reckless abandon that to me is almost uncanny in the effect it produces. One side of the vest is composed of two strokes of a brush as broad as one's hand, yet the illusion is flawless. One senses a certainty of touch that is the highest test of genius.

I called Cahill's attention to those broad flourishes and jokingly accused him of lending encouragement to bill posters to turn portrait painters. He replied that it had been necessary for him to sketch in the figure rapidly; that he had to finish it while under the spell of an accidental pose. If he had worked deliberately the impression would have escaped him.

For such art there are few rules. It rises superior to all formulas. A student can no more copy the effect that Cahill produces with his broad, stiff brush than he can reproduce the languid, subtle, maddening smile of the Mona Lisa.

One who has followed this description closely will discover that Cahill's style combines that of the Renaissance and early Dutch painters with that of the modern impressionists. It is eclectic, uniting the best of three schools; but to me the influence of Rembrandt is more marked than that of any other.

TROWBRIDGE PAINTING.
Similar in conception and execution is the one other humoresque in the collection, a full length portrait of Charles Trowbridge, painted for the Family Club of San Francisco. This is a portrait in costume representing an Irish gentleman of the seventeenth century. Here again one sees old age in its happy mood. It expresses action, contrasted pleasantly to the repose of the other. The subject is caught in the act of stepping forward to clasp the hand of a welcome guest. The head is tilted slightly backward and the chin elevated. A smile parts from the lips and lights up the whole countenance. The texture of the skin is so soft that one cannot determine where the dimples of the cheeks stop and the wrinkles begin.

So strong is the illusion that one almost seems to hear the words of greeting uttered here. Here too is the spirit of good fellowship, slightly more demonstrative than in the portrait of Dr. Stewart. It symbolizes the proverbial warmth and geniality of the Family Club greeting among its members.

One senses again the accidental pose and the rapid but certain touch of a hand that is sure of its effects. I get the impression that the artist hugely enjoyed painting this canvas and that it is the product of sheer love of creation. It is apparent that, in each instance, the canvas gave the kindest spirits to pose for the pictures and that the artist dominated his subject.

Both canvases fairly radiate geniality. One sees through the window of the eyes the happy hermit within. The shingles may be falling from the roof and the foundations may be a bit unsteady, but the hermit is going to thoroughly enjoy his habitation while it lasts.

I observed a number of spectators standing before these canvases and a smile lighted every countenance, so contagious is the good humor the canvases radiate. A painter who can awaken such happy emotions simply by making some strokes with a wet brush on a piece of canvas is himself one of nature's masterpieces.

A noted art critic has written that the greatest picture is one that can give pleasure to the greatest number of people for the longest time. Measured by that standard there is no disputing the artistic value of these humoresques.

Viewing them, however, deprived me perhaps of capability for the highest enjoyment of his serious work. I would have stood longer in contemplation of the portraits of Paul Shoup, Henry Morse Stevens and John D. Spreckels if that of Dr. Stewart had not been in the gallery.

To me Gen. Pershing's portrait savors more of the conventional. It was painted as the great commander wanted it. Every strap and buckle of his field uniform is exactly in place. It is just back from the presser. There are no splashes of mud on the boots, no line of fatigue in the face. It smacks somewhat of Washington officialdom.

I would have preferred action to such perfect repose. But it is perhaps the Gen. Pershing that should be transmitted to posterity. A high light thrown against a warm dark background again accentuates every feature of a strong but mobile face. One comes unconsciously under the spell of a clear, blue eye that never wavers, of the chin of adamant, of the nose that is compelling force that was back of the American expeditionary forces.

While not a single bar or military medal is displayed, no one can mistake his rank. It is the simplicity of true greatness. One senses the burden that rests on those shoulders without causing them to flinch in the slightest degree.

Hanging on the wall beside the Pershing canvas and its complement is a portrait of Willy Shiele, a young recruit just turned seventeen on his way to the front. There are the soft, roguish eyes of adolescence. He has yet to learn the smell of German powder and the color of German blood.

Still under the home influence, he has not caught the martial spirit. It is the malleable human clay not yet hardened by the fire of battle. This is another example of Cahill's power as a genre painter. One sees there the fodder, still green in the stalk, for the German cannon. And one asks unconsciously how long will such sacrifices be necessary.

There they stand, side by side in their mute appeal, the young recruit and the grizzled commander, the horror and the glory of war. As I looked a fleck of red paint in the background of Gen. Pershing's

TELLS ABOUT BOGUS MONEY.

Henry M. Moffett, then in charge of the secret service offices in San Francisco, took the stranger over. Of course, it was Wilkin. Wilkin took us to his Los Angeles studio, located at 311 South Hill street, and showed us a plant that was warranted to answer. He had pressed that were models of ingenuity. He was in the midst of engraving plates for $25 bills. In a separate room—a well-appointed chemical laboratory—he had all the necessary mechanism for making the paper.

By this time the paper mill in Dalton, Mass., had come to the conclusion that the paper was a forgery. It had to. But the paper makers declared it to be as good as the stuff they turned out and that they couldn't detect the difference. Wilkin gave us his formula. It was different from that used in Dalton, but the results were the same. And, please remember, he had merely looked through that plant. He had never worked there. And he had never worked there.

Various women who had been cast aside by Wilkin had helped to secure information to indicate the man to confess. It was because of things that they had told us and which we accused Wilkin of that he consented to make a clean breast of it. He showed us his entire layout first. There was a card index that would delight the soul of the clerical expert. He had records of every bill he had put into circulation—the date, the place, the time of day, the incident attending the passing of the bill and even the sort of clothing he wore at that time.

In October, 1916, he went to jail for fifteen years. I saw him to his cell. You couldn't help liking the fellow. (Copyright, 1923, by the New York Herald.)

His Reasonable Request.
Two men were sentenced by a self-appointed court to be hanged for horse stealing. The place selected for the execution was the middle of a bridge spanning a river. The first noose was tied insecurely and the prisoner dropped into the river, swam ashore and escaped.

As the second rope was being drawn out, the man under the noose cried: "Say, fellows, make sure of the knot this time. I can swim."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Dispatch.]

DANCE DESPITE FIRE.

Incendary Blaze Fails to Force Hall to Close.

Philip H. Goldberg, one of the proprietors of the Goldberg-Hoskins dancing hall at Sixteenth and Flower street, where a fire, believed to be the business of the origin, occurred late Friday night, stated yesterday that beginning tomorrow there will be no interruption in the business of the hall.

Dancing arranged for tomorrow evening will be conducted, according to schedule. The Times-Mirror has been made, expressed to be held, Mr. Goldberg said City inspectors yesterday viewing the premises and after recommending repairs to be made, expressed the belief that the improvements will bring about conformity with the building laws. Mr. Goldberg said.

The investigation was continued yesterday to determine the origin of the fire which is believed to have been started by an incendiary bomb.

Quoted Shakespeare.

While dancing with an awkward gentleman, a lady once exclaimed: "I feel so very camped." After the dance was over, her solicitous husband inquired: "What a lovely man, arranged which his helpmeet, with thoughts of what her feet had suffered, replied: "Hell hath no fury."

Then we tried the Cinderella Roof to complete the evening. They had refused to inject any amount of suspense into the contest. The Ella Roof which is now a glorified dance-hall, admitting ladies for 40 cents and gentlemen for 40 cents, with war tax. It is simply a check full of effervescent dancers that there was hardly room to dance. The only thing that was new was the thing the W. C. T. U. could have there. It was all very informal. It rests entirely with the enterprises and the dancing as to who dances with whom. There was a slight preponderance of ladies unattended. They did not have to be wall-flowers as to who dances with youthful young men were putting on no end of dash with a cigarette in their mouth. It was a very thing the W. C. A. U. could have objected to. Everybody was happy, informal, but strictly sober. They lighted the lights for dancing in a way, which lends a little mystery to the occasion, but it was no crowded that plotting and good dancing. The price of admission, a minimum pre-occupation, $1.30 paid the bill.

The screen people furnish the stimulant for the commoners, but it is not the commoners who are the thing. It was done too discreetly for my sharp eyes. At all events I was not yet a drink at Sunset Inn, but only a very happy and good time. And even all this glamour only cost us $5.50.

It is much the same at the Hollywood. It is the same as many of the screen celebrities live and

BE PRETTY TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, bring back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—(Advertisement.)

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

Trend of Political Thought and Action.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

Democrats are much put out over being put out and some of the faithful in California are persuaded that the road to national rehabilitation of the party can be constructed in California by the election of a Democratic Governor in this State. This line of reasoning has progressed to such an extent that a few enthusiastic Democrats have formed tentative plans for a State-wide organization, and possible campaign contributions are being looked up.

At this time four possible candidates are under consideration and so amiable and unselfish are the proponents of these gentlemen that assurance is confidently given that a choice is made the force of the discarded three will fervently lecture, as the case may be, Mattison E. Jones of Glendale, get behind the unfortunate as-

HEIR CHEATED BY DEATH.

Moses Larus, for whom a fortune amounting to $1,000,000 was recently reported awaiting in France, died near Ogdensburg, N. Y., in 1912, according to advice from that place yesterday.

When word was received here a short time ago that Jean Larus, who died in France almost a century ago, had left to his relatives a large estate, it was found that Moses Larus, or in event of his death, his son, "Bill" Larus, was to fall heir to the fortune which, with interest now amounts to $7,000,000. Search was made at Watertown, N. Y., where Moses Larus was reported to have lived, but no trace of him could be found. It was said, however, that "Bill" Larus, nephew of the late Jean Larus, was in the country, which resulted in publication of the story and the finding of relatives who are said to be legal heirs to the vast fortune.

Similar to the plight they asserted the Republicans to be in, that is, a party split. Two or three Democratic officials said to be responsible for rumors that Federal Judge Bledsoe may come from the bench and seek the Governorship. Other friends of Judge Bledsoe are almost vehement in denying that he will run. San Francisco Democrats, according to one of their number, regard Mr. Woolwine as a good District Attorney; are positively entranced with the wisdom of Mr. Bledsoe as a judge, and think Mr. Jones is a credit to his city and State, but when the matter gets down to who shall be the Democratic candidate for Governor, all names should line up for the Democratic ticket.

And to the end that he may give this word under the most favorable circumstances, a pleasurable extraordinary is said to be en route to Egypt, where lies the Sphinx. Let Mr. Phelps' pronouncement.

Alfred L. Bartlett, chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, admits that the Democrats are in a deadly earnest, but says they are ready to that extent only.

The way of Hiram Johnson is hard. Despite a return almost to his old-time form in his denunciation of the four-power treaty, the press of the United States will not let him forget the resentment aroused over his failure to take a Senator's part in the voting on the seating of Senator Newberry. A veritable avalanche of bitter words has fallen upon Senator Johnson's head, the following editorial in the Cincinnati Post, headed "Where was Hiram?" being a fair example:

"How pitiful is the political position of Hiram Johnson today! Washington, the Democratic from California a scant hour after the sale of the Michigan seat in the Senate."

SENTENCE WAS REGULAR SHOCK

Convicted Assassin Suffers Paralytic Stroke in Court.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

MOUNDVILLE (W. Va.) Jan. 28.—John Kavanaugh suffered a paralytic stroke in the Marshall county court yesterday when he was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for setting fire to his house to collect the insurance. He was unconscious for three hours. His condition is serious, county physicians said.

Senate had been ratified to Newberry by five votes. Hiram goes to his home, whence, a day later, he issues a re-statement of his position on the four-power pact, a statement in which no one has the slightest interest at this time, save possibly Hiram.

"For twelve years acclaimed as the fearless fighting leader of the insurgent, Hiram has been exposed to be the 'knight without fear and without reproach'."

"But the hour when he was most needed, where was Hiram? He knew, when he went to California in December, that the Newberry case was coming up early in January. He knew almost to a man the line-up for and against Newberry."

"He knew his vote was needed desperately, that indeed, it might be the deciding vote between a free and a purchasable Senate."

"He said that he would not vote for Newberry, and with equal disingenuousness he told his Newberry friends that he never would vote against Newberry."

"And he kept his word to both sides! It is said 'no man can obey two masters.' Hiram did it."

"William Jennings Bryan tells a story which seems to fit the case. 'An old negro was hoeing cotton, an old broiling-hot day in Alabama.'

"Looking up into the face of the blistering sun, he said: 'What was your name, December, when we needed you?'"

Southern California Republican women are not rallying to the support of Gov. Stephens. Thoughtful managers of the Governor's political fortunes have done all in their power to make the rallying easy and popular, but the results are more or less barren. The women are not enthusiastic and a considerable number of the most influential among them are saying that they will either support another candidate for Governor or remain neutral until after the August primaries.

However, the determination of the women to have a woman candidate in every Assembly and Senatorial district in the State is said to be so strong that a coalition with the Stephens forces may be advocated as a political expedient. Names of the women chosen in the various districts will soon be made public, it is said.

Assemblyman George Hume of Ventura, who broke the record during the last session of the Legislature, for the number and diversity of legislative disclosures, is thinking of transferring his talents to Congress. At least, he intimated such an intention in Ventura recently during the course of an address to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Assemblyman Elmer P. Bromley, whose district lies within the senatorial district of State Senator Tenkin will seek election to the State Senate if Senator Tenkin decides not to enter the race himself. Mr. Bromley was chairman of the Assembly Judiciary Committee during the last session.

Supervisor Wright, appointed by Gov. Stephens to fill out the unexpired term of State Bank Superintendent Jonathan S. Dodge, will have opposition if he seeks election to the post he now holds by appointment. Several aspirants have appeared, among the most prominent being W. A. Blanchard, president of the Board of Trustees of Burbank. Mr. Blanchard's friends are active and enthusiastic.

Those who may think that no campaign for Sheriff is complete without the candidacy of Sam Brown will not be disappointed. Mr. Brown announced that he will again enter the race. He says he will be elected this time.

Jonas Killian of El Monte expects Congress to adopt a measure restricting its membership under the Federal census of 1920, and under such expectation, considering plans for running for Congress in the new district that action at Washington will create.

Mr. Killian is president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the San Gabriel Valley and has been a successful rancher in the valley for many years.

Judge Crall is said to be grooming himself for the appellate bench.

More than 600 field deputies from the office of Registrar of Voters are registering voters in all sections of Los Angeles county. The familiar sidewalk registering stations will make their appearance in the downtown section of the city within a few days. Mr. Lyons hopes to virtually complete registration before April 1.

Reports of the recent activities of State Superintendent of Instruction Wood indicate that as an educator he is making a strong record in State machine politics. Mr. Wood last year urged the teachers to get into politics. This year he is in politics himself, both in behalf of his own re-election and the re-election or defeat of candidates with whom an educator ordinarily is not expected to concern himself.

Exhibits Wood-blocks. By special arrangement the exhibit of wood-block portraits which includes several local men, Frank Keenan, actor, and Eugene's Guarri, conductor and composer, by Frank Garita, will be open to the public without charge today from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the MacDowell Club of Allied Arts in the Tolo Building, First street and Broadway. The exhibit, which also presents many of the stars of the Chicago Opera Company, is open daily except Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

What is Palos Verdes?

GREAT IDEAS are the milestones that have marked the progress of the world. The Pyramids, the Acropolis, the Cathedral at Rheims, were dreams first. The Panama Canal, our own great aqueduct—were dreams before they took shape in stone and steel. The greatest achievements of all times have been dreams.

Palos Verdes is an idea interwoven with the fine steel of common sense—a vision founded upon a rock—the greatest conception of its kind in human history.

The Palos Verdes Ranchos of 16,000 acres . . . about 25 square miles . . . lying at the gates of Los Angeles to the westward, gently rolling slopes that look out on the broad Pacific has been chosen as the site for what is intended to be the most beautiful home city in the world.

It will be a city of art, dignified by institutions of learning, of the sciences—with beautiful homes set against the soft greenness of its rolling slopes—homes for the man of moderate means as well as the man of wealth.

There will be hundreds of community groups with their parks and playgrounds, these tributary to three main civic centers. The construction of all buildings, the landscaping and ornamentation will be subject to the advice and approval of an art jury of nationally known architects and city planners.

The mild, frostless, sunny climate of Palos Verdes

... the comparative absence of winds and fogs . . . combined with the natural location and topography of the land . . . makes it the one place of the Pacific Coast best fitted for such an undertaking.

An option has been taken to purchase these 16,000 acres for $5,000,000 or, an average price of $312 an acre . . . a cost almost unbelievably low, compared with the present prices of adjoining property. The development and improvements planned, call for an additional expenditure of $30,000,000, bringing the total cost to $35,000,000.

This amount is now being taken up by individual subscriptions in the form of what are termed "convertible" and "non-convertible" notes, offering to the investor the right of selecting home or business property at actual cost or, of participating in the probable enormous profits of the project as a whole when purchased by the public in the open market at its greatly increased valuation. All funds are placed in trust with the Title Insurance and Trust Co., Trustees.

Development will be begun as soon as $15,000,000 has been subscribed, should this amount not be underwritten by June 1, 1922, every penny both principal and interest paid by the subscribers will be returned by the Trustee less only the Trustee's fees of one per cent of the amount paid. Thus the subscriber is protected absolutely against any possibility of loss.

An extensive national advertising campaign will be launched within the next few weeks. This will appear in the leading American newspapers and magazines, placing this project before investors throughout the country. Today, Southern California people are offered an opportunity which may be gone a few weeks hence. Those who are interested may obtain all desired information by writing for literature; by visiting the big model exhibit, 2nd floor Philharmonic Auditorium or by applying at 312 Title Insurance and Trust Building where subscriptions may be made in person.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Booth, a well-known resident of Buchanan county, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound, and 1/2 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store for very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."—[Advertisement.]

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health

Baltimore, Maryland.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls, as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WALKER, 3018 Rockland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well.

Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done, or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a Little 'Freezone' on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, and shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of 'Freezone' for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.—[Advertisement.]

PAIN IN YOUR SIDE?

Read What Mrs. Lawrence Says East Oakland, Cal.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at different times for over twenty-five years, and it has never failed me. One time I took it when troubled with inflammation and it soon cured me. At another time I took it for severe pains in my right side; this time I was troubled with indigestion and my bowels were constipated, and the 'Favorite Prescription' again helped me out so I was soon well and strong. I can always depend on this remedy."—Mrs. A. E. Lawrence, 1341 15th Ave.

PROTECTS HIS EARS.

His one concern is to protect his ears. If a stumble or an unexpected hole in the bed of the stream caused his head to plunge under the water he promptly turns over on his back and gives up the ghost. Let a mule's ears be filled with water and he will drown without a struggle.

What a curious problem of mixed blood. This is not true of either the horse or the ass, but it is invariably true of the mule.

At the head of Piatana Canyon, four hours from the Sinaloa, Mr. Booth, the mining engineer, was awakened to sudden life by an incident that otherwise would not have attracted his attention.

The trail left the bed of the stream to pass through the village of Piatana, consisting of a dozen

MINERAL WEALTH WAITS COMING OF RAILROADS.

Surly Mexicans Guard Secret of Rich Deposits of Metals by Golden River of Aztecs.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

(This is the fourth chapter of a narrative by Mr. Hogue of a romantic journey on muleback over the old Aztec trail on the West Coast of Mexico into the heart of the mineral and bandit country of the Sierra and Durango mountains, where gold and copper properties containing millions of dollars of precious metals are held by the right of the strongest. A fifth chapter will appear next Sunday.)

Five days were consumed, riding by easy stages and stopping to examine gold and silver properties along the route. In reaching the banks of the Sinaloa, the golden river of Aztec and early Spanish legends.

This stream, with its tributary, the Bazanapa, was called by the early Indian tribes "Mipiri," meaning "mother of gold." Placer miners have delved in their sands for untold centuries. At one time they were fabulously rich and fierce battles were fought by the armies of rival native kings for their possession.

On the rocks and cliffs along their banks are carved in curious hieroglyphic tablets commemorating famous victories and warning against trespass. What a field for archaeological research! Unversed in the early Indian tongue, I could only speculate on their meaning. One must have commemorated a famous hunting expedition, for the outlines of a deer and a hunter's bow were easily discernible.

ONE MODERN DESIGN.

On the side of a cliff in a deep gorge an Indian moseo pointed out a curious design for such a place. It consisted of two hearts, pierced by an arrow with hieroglyphs beneath. That evidently must have been comparatively modern, for it is not likely that the ancient tribes pictured the seat of passion in the shape of a fig leaf.

The moseo seemed quite excited about it. He talked in the patois of the mountains, not a word of which was intelligible to me; and he twisted and writhed, trying to make me understand by pantomime.

He would make a forward gesture, as though some one were being thrown to the earth; then he raised and dropped his arms, as if to crush something with a heavy instrument. Then he would stop and look at me with inquiring eyes, like an intelligent hunting dog.

He concluded the pantomime by wiping his eyes with his two forefingers, as though some one were weeping.

INDIAN LOVE STORY.

I think I understood. He was telling me the legend of a forbidden love, in which some one was stoned to death. Stoning to death on the West Coast does not mean pursuing some one and throwing rocks at him. The victim is bound with leather thongs, his head is placed on a rock and his skull is crushed with great stones. As the Indians had no weapons of iron or steel, this was the logical method for official executions.

I suspect that the stoning to death written about in the Old Testament referred to a similar process.

During the summer rains the Sinaloa had been at flood tide and, like the rivers of California, it had changed its channel slightly in certain places. The waters had fallen and along its banks Indian gold hunters were at work. They were mostly women and children, however, for the men were all in the hills harvesting the corn.

NEW DEPOSITS FOUND.

Every fall after the flood waters recede new placer beds are found, where "pay dirt" has been uncovered by the shifting of the channel. It is in the golden sands that thrifty Indian maidens delve for their "dot," for the legend of young warriors hiding their wealth in only a polite fiction. The maidens find that the possession of sufficient placer gold to purchase a cow and chickens serves as a magic charm to awaken masculine affections. Marketing marriageable maidens is as much of a problem in the Indian lodge as in a Los Angeles bungalow.

Don Miguel told me of a ruse practiced by one Indian maiden of not very prepossessing appearance to ensnare a mate. She had served for a time as a cook in a mining camp and learned something of the wiles of the Gringo. Selecting the Tarumare of her choice she told him of a witch pocket she had found where the bank had been washed away. Then, in strictest confidence, she showed him a cotton sack containing as much as a pound of placer gold, which had been melted into a brick. He at once became violently affectionate and a marriage was arranged in short order.

NO DIVORCE LAWS.

A month later he was brought before the council of the tribe for beating his wife. He grumbled that, when he tried to dispose of the treasure, it was found to consist almost wholly of copper filings. But there are no divorce laws permitted under the tribal laws, except for adultery. So the crafty maiden provided with a helpmate, until death do them part.

Five times we were forced to ford the Sinaloa, before we arrived at Banana Canyon, leading deeper into the heart of the mineral country. Forging streams on a Mexican mule is one of the serious problems of the trail.

A mule possesses a congenial repugnance for a bath. Only the moseo knew how to impel him into a stream. Once in the water, he loses all his docility and his composure.

PROTECTS HIS EARS.

His one concern is to protect his ears. If a stumble or an unexpected hole in the bed of the stream caused his head to plunge under the water he promptly turns over on his back and gives up the ghost. Let a mule's ears be filled with water and he will drown without a struggle.

What a curious problem of mixed blood. This is not true of either the horse or the ass, but it is invariably true of the mule.

At the head of Piatana Canyon, four hours from the Sinaloa, Mr. Booth, the mining engineer, was awakened to sudden life by an incident that otherwise would not have attracted his attention.

THE FINALE of the Annual Clearance

Which Is to Culminate in All Its Value-Importance
On These Two Last Days of the Month

Monday, January 30
Tuesday, January 31

—Just two days, but what a wonderful two days they promise to be!

—Two days which we believe should prove to be the two most remarkable days in all the Clearance.

—It is not what we say that is important—it is what we do that counts, and yet this announcement must convey to you what we hope to accomplish.

—In the very beginning of our plans for the Annual Clearance we said, "Let's set aside the last two days to bring this Clearance to a fitting climax. Let us provide wonderful groups of desirable merchandise—let us price it so attractively that few will be able to resist coming!"

—So with this idea in mind the buyers went to the markets and the results of their special trips were out of the ordinary, to say the least.

—We might tell you of the boxes and bales and even carloads of merchandise that came to the Receiving Room as the result of our search.

—We might tell you of the wonderful co-operation of manufacturers and wholesalers.

—We might tell you of the enthusiasm that greeted this merchandise on its arrival; of the enthusiasm that seems to pervade the entire organization.

—Indeed, we might take pages of copy to portray in word pictures the significance of this message.

—But nothing that we could say can begin to be as significant as the merchandise itself, and the extremely low prices at which it is to sell.

—When you see this merchandise in its unusual variety, and you note these selfsame low prices, you will not be surprised that we have predicted for these final two days in the month, the most remarkable two days' selling in all the Clearance.

—In this final supreme effort of the month, we bring forward from reserve merchandise, offerings that are possible only at a time like this.

—The Announcement may appear to be a large one, yet it does not begin to convey all the economy news.

ISLAND FOLK
BURY PRINCE.Last of Hawaiian Royalty
Laid to Rest.Picturesque Pageantry Marks
Funeral Rites.Kuhio Was Well Known in California.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)
HONOLULU, Jan. 10.—For the last time in centuries of an island people's history, the stately pageantry and picturesque symbolism of ancient Hawaii marked the passing of a warrior-prince, when Prince Kuhio Kaimamohana, who died in Honolulu January 7, was buried in the great mausoleum where the bones of Hawaiian royalty before him rest.

Prince Kuhio, as he has been known many years generally known, was well known in California from numerous visits he has made there in his twenty years' service as Territorial delegate to Congress. Today there are in Hawaii a considerable number of Californians who numbered him as their friend. An even larger number of visitors to Hawaii for the most part—saw of Sunday, January 15, a ceremony such as is witnessed nowhere but in Hawaii, and then only upon the death of a member of the royal family.

FUNERAL OF QUEEN.
The last such ceremony before this was when Queen Lydia Liliuokalani—known to the world as "Queen Lili"—was borne in a great coffin of native woods upon the shoulders of old-time retainers of the royal household—from the old Territorial capital building, once her palace—and later her prison, to the mausoleum where the coffin was placed among others of its kind.

The unique native rites and ceremonies which marked the funeral of Queen Liliuokalani were invoked for what is probably the last time when Prince Kuhio was laid to rest. While not the last of royal blood in Hawaii, the disappearance of old-time Hawaiian customs is rapid and inexorable. The Prince's nephew, young David Kalakaua, son of Princess Kawanakoa, spends much time and is widely known in Southern California. The last days only. The woman with the year for better articles in her home and without the entire wherefor for such achievement, should not overlook this opportunity.

Rowling.
Is there a woman of housewifely instincts who does not covet a set of those clear glass mixing bowls? It she herself possesses one, she wishes to present a set to her friend. This week a set of five is obtainable at a bargain price.

A La Navajo.
Sweaters for wear at sports have taken into themselves the patterns and sometimes the colors of the Navajo. Stripes are likely to run round, rather than lengthwise of these garments, and sometimes there are hats which match the stripes or which merely hint at the color and the patterning of the garment.

Calico.
Get out the old patch quilt, hidden in grandmother's chest and you will surely find among the "squares," one made from the self-same calico shown in the latest imported chapeaux! Yellow and red are the blended tones and when all is said, there is undeniable quaintness in the blending—is it in the fabric? Anyhow, the latest hats are fashioned wholly from that calico and trimmed with queer little perky of flowers which look as though made from celluloid. Others hats of straw are bound with this same calico and have hand-made flowers of the same material.

THE NEW.

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

They Are Wearing:
Vells dotted boldly in the brilliant color of the hat trimming. Usually these vells are of the drape variety, but there is an incoming vogue for face vells and those extending but to the nose. The latter, we were formerly accustomed to term "tea vells."

Blouses, skirts and even entire frocks, or coat dresses, all-overed in machine or hand embroidery. The threads used are either silk or worsted and contrast with the color of the garment. Russian, Czech-Slovakian or other eastern designs are favorites for this embellishment.

Petticoats of material so attenuated as to come under the old-time name of "finger-ring" stuff. Chiffons, fine silk and lace, as well as washable satins, form the basis of these underthings, which are often handsomely embroidered.

This Week's Buys.
Marbles, either in groups or single figures are on sale at the house of house-wares at notable savings. A genuine Italian marble, tastefully chosen, lends atmosphere to the home.

Wanted in the last climaxed days of the annual sale in that big Broadway store.

Dollar Downing.
The very unusual concessions, allowing the purchase of any article in that high-class furniture house, by the payment of one dollar down, will continue during the next two days only. The woman with the year for better articles in her home and without the entire wherefor for such achievement, should not overlook this opportunity.

To fill the larder of a big trans-Atlantic liner for a single trip requires 1000 chickens, fifty beaver, fifteen calves, 250 sheep, seventy lambs, 150 pigs, 350 ducks, ninety geese, 180 turkeys, 800 quail, and 250 each of plumpers of separate varieties, to say nothing of tons of flour, groceries and other food-stuffs.

In Italy it is not uncommon for a criminal to receive full sentence on each of a number of separate convictions. In Sicily, for instance, a man named Lupo Salvatore was found guilty of sixty-three different acts of fraud. Calumet Baking Powder has more than the ordinary leavening strength, therefore you use less. It's by far the most economical baking powder.

You pay about half the amount asked for high-priced brands. It goes twice as far as most other brands—so you save when you buy it—you save when you use it. But the most important economy of is in its superior quality. Regardless of price, Calumet is the highest grade baking powder made. It is absolutely pure in the can—in the baking. Leaves no harmful residue.

Calumet wherever placed, always gives satisfaction. It is the largest selling brand of baking powder in the world and is made in the largest, cleanest, most up-to-date Baking Powder factories in existence.

The millions of housewives who use Calumet secure better bakings at a more economical cost than those who do not use it.

With all this evidence of superiority—with all this proof of better bakings, why should you be satisfied to stand the exorbitant expense of over priced powders or the faults and failings of cheap, inferior brands. You shouldn't—and you won't—after one Calumet bake-day trial.

Beware of This—

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

The old mission at Capistrano and landscapes of the San Juan Valley were well received in Chicago, one of the mission canvases being exhibited in the show of American artists at the Art Institute, and now hung in an invited collection in the Art Museum of Indianapolis.

Prints at MacDowell Club.
A most varied and comprehensive exhibition of prints from early times to the present is shown at the MacDowell Club, 740 Building, for three weeks. Some paintings are also exhibited, among them twenty thumb-box sketches, "color notes" from the brush of Clarence Hinkle.

News and Notes.
Edith Roberts, recently art director of Wanamaker's advertising department in New York, has opened a studio in Los Angeles for the study of commercial art. She is exceptionally well equipped for her work, having been an honor student at Pratt Institute, where she studied with Arthur Dow, and later working with C. S. Phillips in magazine illustration and poster work. Miss Palmer had at one time the largest studio in Greenwich Village devoted exclusively to poster work. Her temporary studio is at Hotel Lee.

This afternoon the Douglas Donations will hold an exhibition of the recent work of Vroque Baker

Alice Blair Thomas has removed from 1908 Hillcrest Road, Hollywood, to 636 West Adams street, Los Angeles, owing to her inability to find in Hollywood a studio large enough to house her large collection of paintings.

Donna Schuster's delightful exhibition of water colors from Laguna Beach and elsewhere, is now shown in the Palace of Fine Arts, San Francisco.

Recent chalk and charcoal portraits by Max Wicorek are exhibited with the New York Water Color Club. Mr. Wicorek has just been made a member of the club.

The next meeting of the California Art Club will be held at 613 Park View street on Saturday, February 4. There will be a dinner for members at 6 o'clock. Reservations should be made with the club of 613 Park View street as soon as possible. Guests of honor for the evening are Mrs. Wicorek, Mrs. Butler, ex-President of the National Art Club, and Mrs. Dickson and a group of artists and associates with whom she has been working in the field of fundage in connection with the work of the California Art Club.

What Women and Their Organizations Are Doing in Southland; Plans Along Many Lines

Headlined in Affairs of Wide Interest.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY MYRA NYE.

In my enthusiasm regarding the last program of the Friday Morning Club, and still under the spell of the quiet charm of Louise Van Ogle's lecture, "The Moscow Art Theater, and its Greatest Success, The Cherry Blossom," a spell that persists in spite of the fact that I, with scores of other club women, have wept and wiped my nose over "Hail the Woman," at the Mission Theater, an incident to say that Friday Morning Club's influence lies not—as they so fondly imagine—in their public affairs meetings, nor in their civic actions, but in their literary leadership.

No other group of women in the United States, and I am conversant with literary circles in New York City, and particularly in Cleveland, produce first, and so lightly the unusual, scholarly and newest things both in books and plays as does this club.

The Moscow Art Theater is at once the joy and the despair of connoisseurs of the drama," said Mrs. Van Ogle, who spent a year in Russia, studying drama and opera the year before the great war. She is familiar with the Russian language, and has translated two Turgeniev plays that were unknown in this country.

NO GLIDING THERE. "There is no plash, no gliding there," she said, continuing her description. "Stagnation, which are the symbols of Chekov, the great playwright, are in a wonderful frieze about the auditorium. There are seaquels on the curtains, and the programs, their pictures are everywhere, giving a sense of lightness and beauty in the dull green and brown tones of the theater."

Intervals between acts are very long and friends converse, drink glasses of tea from the ever-bubbling samovars and black or white vodka. The theater-goers come, a silent fur-muffled throng from the silent snow-muffled streets. Within all is warmth, light, beauty and soft joy especially at the time of the presentation of "The Cherry Orchard."

The orchard is seen through windows of the stage, it is an incense-breathing day in May and one can hear the summer sounds, almost the buzzing of the bees, and actually summer perfumes are wafted out to the audience in a subtle fragrance.

Chekov, who wrote the play is a realist and the Moscow Art Players bring out of a theater of detail, a mighty significance that is clear cut like an etching. Their acting is in a class by itself, said Mrs. Van Ogle. They have reached a pinnacle of excellence unexcelled by any others the world over. This she said is quite generally conceded.

TRAGEDY OF INACTION. A California university girl who was obliged to read the play in her course of study said to Mrs. Van Ogle with a wail, "why nothing ever happens. Russians must be the stupidest people on earth to like a play like that."

"But it is life," Mrs. Van Ogle replied. "It is difficult for youth to understand the tremendous tragedy of inaction."

As she read brief extracts from the play it was clear that through this simple bit of realism not only was the tragedy of the family who lost the cherry orchard through their lack of initiative revealed but the tragedy of the entire Russian people.

Mme. Krimmer, the Russian actress, wife of the author of the play who recently died, takes the part of Mme. Rastavskaya and through her is revealed the oriental fatalism that runs like a thread through the nature of all Russian women, belonging to that class who are wont to say to their sons, said Mrs. Van Ogle, "what you need is a mistress that your manner may be more polished." This she said is suggested as an American mother might suggest that her grown son take dancing lessons.

TYPICAL RUSSIAN. Mme. Rastavskaya is capricious and changeable as all women of her kind in Russia, but temper her capriciousness with such a charming smile that no one can withstand her—servants, men nor women. She is always expecting something to happen, expecting disaster, but never does anything herself to prevent it. She spends her money like water and yet is on the verge of bankruptcy. She gives a gold piece to a beggar because the silver piece is too far down in the folds of her purse, and then her heart is broken because they sell at auction the beautiful cherry orchard where her father and her father's fathers have lived always, yet she might have prevented it.

With an abandon of grief and tragedy she tells the man who is in love with her daughter how she loves the cherry orchard and how her heart will break to leave it, and she ends up with, "Well, I have to let you marry Lena, but you will have to get your beard cut first. I hate it that way." What is that music? Oh let me show you the new step."

REVEALS RUSSIAN MALE. Stanislavsky whose name is known in Russia as John Manafeld's was once in America, takes the part of Leonid and through Leonid is revealed the Russian male who is tolerant of his own crimes and those of others, who admits cowardice if he has shown it, who thinks it a crime only to steal from the class above him.

At the literature luncheon February 21, Mrs. Benjamin Goldman will read from the writings of A. M. S. Hutcheson and Mrs. Alice Hunnewell "Three Soldiers," by John Dos Passos that book of the war which Dr. Moore, chairman of the section, says should be read by every lover of generous youth and by every hater of war. A man or woman too squeamish to read it is too nice for life or truth.

The District Federation. To discuss constructive plans for work, to "get together" and discover what the various departments are doing, the philanthropic, social, industrial and social service chairmen of the district, including all the clubs, will meet at the chairman of these departments on the eighth floor of the Broadway Department Store, Tuesday, at 10:30 a.m. Luncheon will be served at noon, 75 cents a plate. Everyone interested in these departments of clubwork is urged to attend this conference, bringing plans if they have them and if not formulating them with the others.

Santa Monica Bay Club. Stability accentuates the coming week in the activities of Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club beginning with the monthly birthday tea, tomorrow afternoon, at which Mrs. T. E. Walker will preside as hostess. The 2:30 program consists of a lecture by Louise Pickney Eddy on "Art in Dress," which will be illustrated by a number of young club matrons appearing as models in a fashion revue arranged by Louise di Goffine.

Tuesday a box luncheon at the home of Mrs. D. W. Sloan, 506 Sixth street, will engage the attention of book and drama section members. A short book review by Mrs. E. R. Maule and discussion of plans for the fancy work bazaar at the April flower show will take up the afternoon.

Arrangements for an elaborate community dance for Bay District young folks are being made by Mrs. J. P. Jartia, corresponding secretary and Mrs. George Valiant.

The Cosmos Club. Mr. R. L. Sawyers, Miss Dorothy McDonald, Miss Mabel Hornady, Miss Ruth Moran and Mrs. Mary Mann, instructors of the operatory school, staged a realistic miniature telephone establishment, following "The Big Rock," which was shown Tuesday afternoon at the Cosmos-meeting, Los Angeles, with its tremendous growth, demands 1,500,000 calls each day over the wires. Patient and impatient members of the club who witnessed the instructive and interesting lecture, will continue to be patient if possible, but the rate raise was by no means satisfactorily explained.

Helen Chalmers Kingston's class in expression will meet Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Seminole Apartments with Mrs. J. Bascom Welch.

The Woman's City Club. The Woman's City Club will meet Monday at 1 p.m. in Walker Theater. The speaker, Dr. J. Franklin Bobbitt, and his subject will be "The Problem of the Public School Curriculum." Dr. Bobbitt is from the University of Chicago and is an internationally known educator. He is here for the purpose of working on a plan for a more practical course in the school system. Nonmembers may obtain guest tickets at the door admitting them to the lecture.

South Side Ebell. Reciprocity Day was celebrated last Thursday by the South Side Ebell with a reception and program in the afternoon instead of the regular morning session. Mrs. George Salim, president, headed the receiving line and Marian Tracie Whiting had the program in character. This consisted of a number of readings representing the work of the various sections of the club.

Next Thursday bids fair to be of special interest to the women of Dr. Bruce Brown speaking from the standpoint "If I Were a Woman."

Business Woman's Civic Club. Representatives of all women's clubs in the Los Angeles district federation and in the Los Angeles county federation of business and professional women will be entertained together socially for the first time at the reciprocity evening of the Business Woman's Civic Club, Monday, beginning at 8 p.m. in its clubrooms, Realty Board Building.

Mrs. J. C. Urquhart, president of the district federation, and Miss Lily Galpin, president of the county, will be heard in addresses following the greetings of the hostess club, extended by Dr. Maud Wilde, the president. The club's department of recreation under Mrs. Margaret Alston will present a program including solos by Helen Tinton Richert, a talented Los Angeles vocalist, who will sing two groups of songs.

In the second group, Mrs. Richert will render:

John C. Urquhart, district president; Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, State vice-president-at-large; Miss Irene K. Jenkins, Mrs. Alta Hilcock, Mrs. Hugh Crawford and Mrs. J. B. Baker. The musical program was presented by the Lesbian Trio, and announcement was made of a card party and luncheon at Colonial Inn, February 2, for the benefit of the Mills College fund.

Mothers and Teachers.

At the executive-board meeting of the tenth district congress of mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations last Wednesday, Mrs. Belle Hoppe was appointed by President Mrs. Julia Noble as chairman of a committee to look after the need of children who are going to school hungry. Three hundred dollars a month was appropriated for the alleviation of this condition.

The interest of the fathers in the Sixty-eighth Street Parent-Teacher Association was demonstrated last Wednesday evening when "Fathers' Night" was the feature, and many were present. Mrs. Milla Tupper Maynard of Manual Arts High School, gave a talk on "Co-operation Between Parent and Teacher," several reels of pictures were projected by the new picture machine. The school orchestra furnished the music.

The council of presidents of the tenth district will be held at the Union League Club auditorium, 285 South Hill street, February 2, at 10 a.m.

A reading by Natalie Potch will be a feature of the afternoon program, with reports of councilors and a question box answering questions regarding "Helps for Association Work." A parliamentary drill will be conducted in the morning by Mrs. P. S. McNutt. A violin duet will be given by Miss Sallor and Miss Moore.

Queen Alexandra Chapter.

Mrs. Cele Ray will entertain the Queen Alexandra Chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, with a card party on next Wednesday at 2 p.m., at the Burlington Apartments, 1728 West Ninth street.

Ingleswood Woman's Club.

Reciprocity day was enjoyed yesterday by the Ingleswood Woman's Club at the Ingleswood High School, where luncheon was served and a musical program was given in the afternoon by Mrs. Arthur H. Badenoch, soprano, and Mrs. Walter F. Reckord, pianist. Mrs. C. M. Green was in charge.

West Ebell Club.

New members will be the honor guests of the West Ebell Club Tuesday afternoon when the program will be followed by a social tea. At the last meeting Mr. Charles Grant Helfner addressed the club and the musical program was given by the Fitzgerald Music Company with Mr. Raymond Harmon, tenor, and Miss Anne Ebert, violinist.

Highland Park Ebell.

With due formality and rejoicing the members of the Highland Park Clubhouse will be burned Tuesday at 2 p.m. Preceding the ceremony Miss Doris June Struble will give the program.

Federated Women's Aid Society.

That people do not always understand theological terms, but they do understand the "cup of cold water" and which is the work of the church pre-eminently while other organizations may offer the cup incidentally, was the philosophy brought out at the meeting of the Federated Women's Aid Society of the Los Angeles Federated Women's Aid Society last Friday when over 100 women were in attendance. The speakers were Mrs. E. C. Cobb, Dr. Henry Chapman Fessenden, Miss Alice Moore and Miss Marie C. Brehm.

Mrs. George E. Buck sang "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," and Mrs. Helen Graham Cost sang "The Lord Is My Strength."

Federation of Music Clubs.

This is election year for the California Federation of Music Clubs and the convention begins almost on the date of the federation's birth, April 18, four years ago. The meeting will be held in San Francisco, April 25 to 28.

"Birthdays Convention" is the name already given to the gathering.

Mrs. Cecil Frankel is closing her second term as president and is arranging with the assistance of her committee a noteworthy program.

With the San Francisco Musical Club, assisted by the Slavsky Chamber Music Society and Mrs. J. E. Birmingham, chairman of the local board, and Mrs. Ethel Johnson Rosenbach, chairman of program, plans are now being perfected. Headquarters will be at the Palace Hotel and there the majority of meetings will be held.

Local work in the federation has been noted by the Musical Digest of New York, which says: "Out in Glendale Cal., there was organized in February last the Glendale Music Club, of which Mrs. Mattie B. Jones is president. It started with fifteen charter members. In three months it had increased the total to 514. Today it has nearly 400. Here is something for us all to consider—the men in particular."

Pasadena Choral Club.

The first concert of the season

"Sleep is the most important of all living functions—the thing that makes possible life itself!"

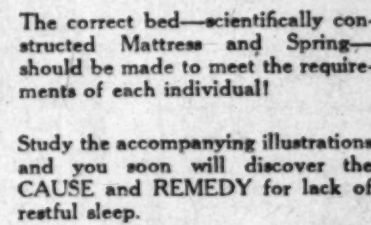

It's a Wise Man Who Buys a Scientifically Made Mattress and Spring—Unmistakable Assurances of Revivifying Sleep!

Probably three-quarters of the adult population of the world do not sleep well, arising unrefreshed and unrestored! Often we imagine ourselves afflicted with insomnia or nervous disorders and find many other excuses for lack of recuperative sleep. In most instances, the REASON FOR UNRESTED and lack of Vital Restoration can be directly traced to FAULTY BEDS!

Relaxation Hindered

Note upper curve line of the body—hip and shoulder almost together, ribs telescoped inside hip. Then note lower line of the body—hip and ribs stretched far apart. See the crescent-shaped spinal column, through which all nerve sensation is transmitted to the brain. Imagine the tension on millions of nerves protesting to the brain! And the strain on the muscular system caused by the hammock-shaped surface of bed. This sleeping posture is the greatest cause of improper sleep and the result of the wrong type of bed.

Perfect Relaxation

Note how the coils support the waist-line—the body rests in the natural curve-lines—the spinal column is held in proper alignment. The bed is correct because, no matter what the position of the sleeper, the tension of the springs carries the weight straight, never allowing it to sink beyond the natural curve-lines. Springs are so tied that each coil acts independently of the other, insuring perfect resting qualities—and complete relaxation.

Perfect Relaxation

Barker Bros.' Own Make Mattresses and Springs are built to conform to scientific principles that promote restful sleep, and should be especially made to fit each individual.

Mouth of the Kolima highway of "farthest north," where their original outposts remain, unchanged unless for the worst, but still marking where the discoverers passed.

Around by her way with Japan, Russia built a wireless telegraph station in this polar stretch more than 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle, along her seventeenth century pathway to Bering Straits and America, and erected monuments on Bering Sea to her explorers. And after three centuries the renaissance of this highway of our civilization was begun.

Here is a story and a tale, more and more important in its moral, especially to European mankind, as the vanities of man and the foolishness of government grow upon us, or at least become more apparent. Here are the lowest temperatures in Asia or Europe. Here under the cold from the Pole and "in the grave of nature which contains only the bones of another world," as has been said of this region, there passed across the moor, the tundra, and the steppe, the true mammoth covered with hair, to freeze in the ice. The first Russian who came found the tracks of these creatures of the past strewn on the Arctic shore, and picked up primitive weapons of bone and stone belonging to Arctic outpost, Verkhoyansk, the Pole of Cold to which I referred in my first letter from East Siberia. The descent to it is a polar baptism which every traveler here remembers. I have talked with two who have been there recently and I have found that it is the first thing they say anything about.

A Yakutsk astronomer who returned from this corridor to the Chukotka Sea in October, told me there were fifty degrees of frost at Verkhoyansk when he arrived. Another said there were sixty the year before. The record is eighty.

The Arctic corridor of East Siberia is formed by Verkhoyansk and Kolima counties of the great Yakutsk province. The highway across this corridor to Bering Sea is from the city of Yakutsk on the Lena, and Verkhoyansk on the Lena, which the faint-hearted Lena starts on but abandons at the Verkhoyansk Range. It traverses the corridor's whole length. Ascending the Lena watershed by easy slopes the roadway reaches a mountain 4000 feet high. From the Lena it descends a declivity "incredibly steep," by a reindeer path, a kind of polarized Bright Angel Trail where the mountain is made nearly pathless. Lower down the road is a horse track. It takes three hours to make the descent to the Arctic plain, and then the journey to Verkhoyansk begins.

As a town, the Pole of Cold consists of twenty to thirty log houses reinforced with earth embankments, and most of them covered with reindeer hides. The place in Siberia, and perhaps no other in the world, has better claims to immortality, for here lies fame. In its austere isolation Verkhoyansk ranks higher in fame quality than Hobart Town, Alcatraz, Port Said and Aden, or the Tophet of the world generally. But its claims are several. It is something more than the trayed and run-down head of civilization laid on ice, and the place which for ages was most dreaded by Russian exiles. Travelers call attention to the fact that the name means the town on the Yana. But instead of being on the River Yana it is situated on two huge ponds just called the "Lakes of Fifth."

In this connection it has something unique, title to which never is questioned by anyone who has been there in summer. It is practical, refrigerated sewage, a fact only confirmed by summer thaw. For cold as this Arctic corridor is, there is no place in it where there is not some thaw, in July or the beginning of August. And at this time the justness of the unpolished name of the generally solidified Verkhoyansk "Lakes" is understood.

Furthermore, according to exile footnotes scrawled on Siberia's scroll of fame, here live a people who can claim as their own, the place of origin of all or most of the climates of the Old World; where are generated wind and calm, cyclones and anticyclones, and all the motions of the atmosphere and elements with which it is freighted, watched as they are in thousands of meteorological stations both in Asia and America. And in these stations respect for Verkhoyansk and credit, are forever established.

Sufficient for a people's pride as this must be, to be unique and unique again, the inhabitants of Verkhoyansk are not content with it. A Russian, elaborating on the claims of Verkhoyansk to immortality, says that its people are still more proud of the fact that in their valley was born the songs of men. For here came one day a rude, unhappy exile, a kind of tipster of the larchwood wilderness, passed on from one exile Valhalla to another until he reached the finality of exile misery under the Verkhoyansk Range. And while he wrecked himself against its cold and inhospitable cliffs, he uttered there his human song. And now the people of the Yana basin express their feeling and understanding of human fate through the lines of this unhappy minstrel.

Verkhoyansk has been visited by a number of Americans. It was here that the American rescue party, returning from its search in the delta of the Lena for the Arctic explorer De Long, found the first evidences of civilization. From this place the road to Bering Straits and America extends to Kolima county. And the shortest distance to its first outlying hamlet of Kresty is a three weeks' journey.

We take the census by counting noses. In the Arctic corridor of East Siberia the census is taken and towns gauged by counting chimneys. Anywhere here a "smoke" is a house, or at least a human habitation. Kresty for instance had five "smokes," and its sister settlements of the tundra are better described by this method than by any other. Some have stoves of wood and unshaken brick to give them fire and often are little more than names and owe their existence in history to the fact that they were outposts of the Siberian exile administration. Hence one comes across phrases such as "Yakut, useless near the Asiatic pole of cold; Tungus, ogresses of seven or eight youths," or "five of six youths of the Sedatche Korikais." They were the last outposts of the exiles. The distance of exile into Siberia was generally proportioned to the degree of the crime as reckoned in St. Petersburg. And the greatest distance always was that along the latitudes of the north stretching farthest in the direction of Alaska and our own continent. And these so-called stations are sometimes only post-road stations.

But more cultured, and generally highly civilized people were to be found farther north in Russia perhaps than any place else in the world. And they lived, if at all, in just such places. This is one of the distinctions of the settlements of East Siberia's Arctic corridor. It is because of the fact that in Russia the most highly cultured people were political revolutionists, and to be "politically suspicious or untrustworthy," was the greatest crime. Persons who were imagined even to fit the description were sent to the regions most remote from the political center. Especially after 1818 the Arctic corridor of East Siberia was the particular billet of Jewish suspects, who generally were professional men and women of high attainments. But it had been a torture chamber for exiles from early times. It was here that Count Golovkin, a Cabinet Minister under Elizabeth, suffered exile and died, along with his wife who accompanied him. Russia had a fine touch in those days. When Count Golovkin became ill he was made by force to attend church, especially on holy days, to endure insult by hearing the priest, after the Liturgy read the Act of Accusation drawn up by his enemies.

The main outpost settlements of Kolima county are Verkhoyansk or Lower Kolima. All are on the Kolima River, on the highway as it runs straight to the Arctic Ocean. Verkhoyansk is the least in importance, for ages having no more than a dozen "smokes." Next is Sredne with twenty or thirty "smokes," as large as the Pole of Cold. From time immemorial it has been the Queen of the Kolima. Like the Pole of Cold it is a county seat with two semiannual general assemblies at which the petty chieftains of the county gather to exhibit their head belts and outlaws given to their ancestors by Catherine II, which hang from these belts. It has a governor who also is Chief Judge, and a Commandant who is guardian of the Chukchee frontier and the road to the Anadyr. In former times he was supposed to have a band of cosacs. It was legendary, for altogether his "army" did not number more than ten or eleven men and they were without uniforms, colors, and even arms.

Today Bredne Kolmak is the only settlement in the interior of the Arctic corridor that has changed much. A route was found connecting it with the main post-road from Kamchatka, and with Narynkan on Okhotsk Sea. Here, where its little flat-roofed huts of logs have remained through the changeless polar centuries almost as when the cosacs set it up on its throne at the mouth of the River Anadyr, is the spot where Russia built the Arctic radio telegraph station. It is the center of civilization on the Arctic slope. What Yakutsk is to the Lena basin, Bredne is to the Arctic corridor in East Siberia. In normal times it has telegraph connections with the world, and instead of having to wait for supplies from Yakutsk through Verkhoyansk, it gets them by the cheaper and quicker route direct from the Okhotsk coast.

Close to the Arctic Ocean is Nijni Kolmak, modest in its pretensions to being a town, for the traveler sees before him "a swampy hollow across which a rough bridge is thrown, and a few log huts 'loft' for the winter. These are covered with snow so that they look like little snow hills, each topped with its chimney made of logs spread over with clay, and with its ice-paned windows looking like eyes blinded by catarrh. A little way off stands a ruined log tower minus roof and door, all that remains of the block-house of the pioneers. Nijni, or 'the fort' as it is called, is 3000 miles from 'the only civilized center.'—Yakutsk.

Yet this is holy ground. Out on the Arctic is 70 degrees north latitude, in its outpost of Bouchard, at the mouth of the Kolima, with five "smokes." Here on a high sixty promontory stands a drift-wood ruin built in the early part of the eighteenth century by Berling's men and known in history as "Laptev's Lighthouse." And there even are relics of a hut built only a little while after, by two Russian merchant explorers seeking the Northeast Passage and grandiosely called after one of them, "Shalashovsk Barracks."

Hard as the Arctic wind that has for centuries gnawed it to the bone, Nijni Kolmak is famous as the point of departure of the Russian explorers, notably Deshnev who rounded East Cape and determined the eastern limits of Siberia from the Arctic to Okhotsk Sea. Here were recruited the expeditions that marched overland and conquered the Anadyr region which forms the easternmost county of the Arctic corridor of East Siberia. A hundred and sixty miles to the eastward was built Anadyrsk Port where for the early part of the century a fair trade was held at which furs and mammoth tusks are bought by traders from the Kolima for necessities of life as these. Then Crepan on the headwaters of the Anadyr was built by Deshnev in 1649, a small stockade around which grew up the little group "smokes" known as Markova, Pokorukoff, and Psolkin, afterward called Anadyr.

The highway to Bering Straits extended from Nijni Kolmak in one bound, to the mouth of the Anadyr where now is the village altogether modern, of Novo Marinsk. It is Russia's commercial outpost on Alaska and British Columbia. Here Russia comes close to the United States and Canada. How close is shown by the existence of a radio plant communicating with Nome, and with its western connections realizing the old dream of the Russian-American telegraph; and also by events of 1928 when the governor at Juneau complained of the numbers of Bolsheviks in Alaska, and Mikeoff, the Seattle-to-Sailbird, having reached Novo Marinsk by the Seattle power schooner Polar Bear, headed a gang of outlaws and started a massacre which killed seventeen lives. He looted the American trading establishment managed by John Lempey of Portland, Mont. for the Hibbard-Swenson Company of Seattle, and his men robbed at the same time Capt. Hansen of Riald Amundsen's Arctic exploring ship Maude, who happened to be passing through the town.

The coast of this Arctic corridor all the way from the delta of the Lena is a well-known to Americans, most of it, for seventy years. Rodgers, Gildner, DeLong, are American names connected with it. And later came the name of Capt. Bartlett, the Canadian explorer. American traders from Nome and Seattle go to the Kolima annually. This year two Seattle schooners took an important cargo of furs from Nijni Kolmak. In this outpost for years lived Father Victor and Father John, two worthy priests who had been in America but preferred to remain on the Arctic frontier and work side by side with the peasants in daily toil.

The oldest settlements of far East Siberia are in its highest latitudes and its coldest parts. The picture of this region painted by Russians is something terrible, doubtless because it is from the brush and pen of a foreigner. Nobody ever has tried to paint a favorable picture of it, that remains as the work of a new generation which is capable of finding in the region the same kind and extent of resources and possibilities of life, wealth and endeavor, as exist in Alaska and northern Canada. But undoubtedly these settlements and this region will live again, because they guard the highway which is the connecting link, across regions belonging to it, of western civilization around the world.

The Success of the "California" In Furnishing Homes is Due to Real Artists and Their Materials

At the "California" are many men expertly qualified to contribute a definite share towards the art of furnishing the home. Each of these men has made a life-long study of his own particular subject and is eminently equipped to counsel and advise on that phase of home furnishing that comes within his province.

And as the skill of the artist depends upon the materials with which he works, so these experts at the "California" acknowledge that their most praiseworthy creations are largely due to the wealth of material at their disposal here —unusual fabrics for draperies and furniture coverings; exclusive wall papers that harmonize so perfectly with the most subtle color scheme; rugs of diverse designs and colorings that sing of the Orient; distinctive furniture pieces that lend themselves so admirably to artistic arrangement.

The wide latitude for selection here enjoyed by this corps of artists and the price comparisons which never fail to reflect favorably upon the "California" are additional reasons why the "California" furnishes so very many beautiful and artistic homes.

February Sale of Furniture

Begins Monday, January 30th—A Sale, the Very Excellence of Which Stampedes with Superlative Thoughts

A sale so totally different—so unspeakably greater—so astoundingly valuable—that we, closest to the picture, most conversant with the values, hesitate to find words as definite as the sale is different—as eloquent as the sale is excellent.

Price Alone Does Not Make Value—But When Price and Quality are Combined as in This Sale Price Becomes an Impressive Factor

Herewith are listed a very few of the many hundreds of value-suites and value-single-pieces—by way of suggestion—

7-PIECE DINING SUITE, 517.50

Expensive beautiful quality walnut in the new poly-chrome Italian finish. Something new and most exquisite. Blue mahogany chair seats harmonize effectively with the polychrome finish. Or the suite may be made up with refectory table and benches for 527.50. One of the most unique values in the sale.

5-PC. DINING SUITE, 61.55

Another moderately priced suite—and one most striking in value appeal! Jacobean oak, hand finished, graceful and simple of design. Expert workmanship characterizes it—chairs with full box construction and genuine brown leather seats. Table and four chairs in Hamburger's February Sale—61.55.

10-PC. DINING SUITE, 319.50

Walnut, mahogany or antique oak finish—hardwood construction throughout—a large suite at very moderate cost, making with the advantage that expert workmanship gives. Buffet, extension table, china closet, serving table, arm chair and side chair—the ten-piece suite complete for 319.50.

BREAKFAST SUITE, 36.75

Quiet little enamel decorated breakfast suite—made for California bungalows. Graceful table and four chairs with arm, low hammer back. The table conveniently folds up and rests against the wall when not in use. In Hamburger's February Sale—complete set, 36.75.

3-PC. LIBRARY SUITE, 198.50

Cane and mahogany—a suite of distinctly better type—the davenport with graceful panel back, great loose cushions and round pillows conducive to genuine comfort. Upholstery of very fine velvet, mahogany and tape or blue and beige. Rocker, chair and davenport—198.50.

BEDROOM SUITE, 159.75

Very moderately priced Ivory bedroom suite—made especially for Hamburger's and conforming with Hamburger's standards of quality in workmanship and finish. Dresser, dressing table, chiffonier and bed—all of hardwood construction—so attractive of line as to insure appeal. Suite complete at 159.75.

MAHOG. SPINET DESK, 79.75

Genuine mahogany in brown antique finish—every detail perfection itself. The two drawers, full pigeon hole back, wide sliding board—and the large size, 44-inch length and 22-inch width making it the more remarkable value at 79.75. A spinet desk, always at home in bungalow or house, will be much in demand in the February Sale.

DAVENPORT TABLE, 29.75

Such value in a mahogany table as Hamburger's has not been in a position to offer in many months. All hand construction, Louis XVI period design, genuine mahogany top. A table to grace large or small California homes—and far, far below its worth at 29.75.

OLD HICKORY ROCKER, 6.95

One of the essentials in every California home. Comfort and rustic beauty—seat and back of genuine hickory bark. Rounded back—a typically rustic piece of furniture at lowest of low prices. Either chair or rocker at 6.95.

PULLMAN DAY BED, 79.75

A piece of furniture almost essential in small California homes! Mahogany case paneled with upholstery of fine velvet—a comfortable couch for day use—and a double bed at night. This is particularly well made—very low priced Pullman day bed in the sale, 79.75.

SEWING CABINET, 19.95

Martha Washington type—made of the very fine selected woods, overlaid in beautiful veneer. Both mahogany and walnut finish at the February Sale price, 19.95. Two convenient drawers and end compartment make this one of the favorite sewing cabinet types.

CONSOLE TABLE, 22.50

The new antique mahogany finish finds expression here—in Italian Renaissance period design. Again Hamburger's presents a table of finest construction at a price unbelievably low. The size, 15 inches by 35 inches, one greatly in demand.

FOUR POSTER BED, 44.75

Genuine mahogany—panels in head and foot—beautifully grained and hand finished—one of the outstanding values in bedroom furniture that Hamburger's offers in the February sale. A choice of either full size or three-quarter beds at this price, 44.75.

BEDROOM SUITE, 302.50

Genuine mahogany with high lights of old blue and gold stripe effects—exquisite Sheraton period—a suite from one of the country's finest furniture makers. Every detail impeccable—dresser, chiffonier, dressing table, bed, night stand, rocker, chair and bench making up the suite. Prices sold singly or en suite.

FINE GRASS ROCKER, 7.95

Great, luxurious imported grass rocker with high back, wide, large arms—a chair that instantly appeals in view of comfort—and one that becomes the greater surprise as one learns it is of the very finest workmanship. Two styles in Hamburger's February Sale, square or round top back—either at 7.95.

In Forty Years of Business, We Have Never Held so Great a Value-Presentation

It is something to see rather than talk about—all the words that might describe the furniture and the values, the variety and the quantity, the planning, the sincerity, the resolve and the results MUST prove inadequate—for it is a sale so MUCH different, so VASTLY greater that there is no basis of comparison that is not ridiculous.

To summarize it all, we might say it is an event resulting from our greatest Resolve, our most extensive Buying and offers our most gratifying Results.

A Valuation at Wholesale of the Furniture Offered Would Reach Half a Million Dollars

—over seventy carloads are included—24 of which have rolled into the great Hamburger warehouse within the last 60 days, bringing that which will prove acceptable and valuable to everyone with furniture needs from that for the little bungalow to the luxurious mansion.

There are many new effects and finishes that have not been seen before—many of them ideally and typically suited to the California home of color and originality.

There are the period designs, modernized to present day needs—there are woods of enduring worth, cabinet work the finest the country has to offer, single pieces and suites “without number”—and in every chair-leg, bit of upholstery, touch of carving, detail of finish there is

Character, Value and Enduring Quality

Value that brings prices down to a level not touched in the last six or seven years—value made greater by virtue of Hamburger's extensive buying—value that must be seen to be understood.

Variety that leaves no need untouched—variety that has made it seem advisable not to attempt detailed illustration—for ten pages would not successfully catalogue the offerings.

A brief business session was held, and the following named officers were elected: Miss Lydia Hudspeth, president; Miss Etta Standfield, vice-president; Miss Jeannie Fisher, secretary; and Miss Eleanor Otis, treasurer. Other members of the class who enjoyed the pleasant affair were the Misses Florence Fisher, Wilma Hodges, Kathleen Henry, Geraldine Rockwell, Alice Boynton and Arvilla Reed.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTHONY ANDERSON.

little of the saddest, of Priscilla the Puritan—Mr. Rich hails from Boston, remember. But he has changed. Being one of the notable night birds, he decided to reveal in all the color there is in the world, to step out of shadowy studio interiors—in other words, to let himself be seen. In the studio, for one, a lovely and subtle thing is revealed—the smaller, more, more especially the newer canvases, fairly sing with color. The Puritan maid has become the flapper—almost. Can you imagine a scheme of color more delicately seductive than that found in "Betty Reading"?

Donna Schuster, too, gives us something of the old as well as of the new. Delicious gray predominance in the old, as in "Early Breakfast"—a charming portrait of the artist herself, by the way. Light and lovely color characterizes the new, as in that vivid piece of feminine portraiture "Romance," a handsome young woman dressed in white and sitting, reading, in a sunlit garden. The same vivid modernity is also noted in "Fountain of Life," which also contains a young woman—Miss Schuster seldom paints men when she can get out, though they often embellish her brilliant water colors.

There is nothing absolutely new from the brush of Mabel Alvarez in the exhibition, neither is there anything old—if we except "Portrait, Dark," which we hardly dare—for Miss Alvarez raved herself with the modern at the very beginning of her artistic career, thanks to her temperament—she is half Spanish—and her training. But the canvases we have seen before, and yet again, that we greet them with genuine pleasure. Among them are a few still-lives, radiant with light and color, and that admirable portrait, which she calls "Young Girl," in "Portrait, Dark," the color is like that of a ripe, low-toned moon in "Young Girl," which is the light—drama, indeed, a part of it. This fusion is, of course, nature's way.

Robert Vennah has already come to Mabel Alvarez in this column today, from the seal he designed for the group. But the seal was only one of the many little and big games he plays with art. He has learned—perhaps has always known—how to make art a happy thing, and his canvases all breathe his exuberance, his finished enjoyment of paint. From the titles he gives his pictures, say "Joy," "Good Morning," and so on. Clean color here, of course, and, especially of course, bright white light. "Joy" gives us two little girls in a swing. "Good Morning" looks like a scene in "Billie's" color of the brush is more completely arranged because the atmosphere of the background.

Thus you see that you can't afford to pass the canvases by. The pictures are shown for about three weeks.

The following are the titles of the canvases:

There is an electrical atmosphere around Robert Vennah, famous American portrait and landscape painter. He has brought it with him all the way from New York to Los Angeles. "Business men would call him a rebel." Though he assured me, the other day, that he is 40 years old, the statement was difficult to credit. He is so full of the joy that counts.

Mr. Vennah and his wife, Bonnie Potter Vennah, whose fame as a portrait painter has come as a surprise, have been in Los Angeles only a few weeks, and they have made their presence felt in many decided ways. They have "given" of themselves freely, responding to our needs with a fine and altruistic understanding. Their experience of life and art is wide, and they discover in Southern California a field where future development is almost boundless. The belief in our great destiny in the world of art may be one of the causes of their generosity with us.

Mr. Vennah has many big and famous "ideas" up his sleeve, shaking them out and scattering them with a fine prodigality. He has to pick them up as he goes, and he has to be sure that they are not lost. Three important ones—his three pet ideas, indeed—will be given to the artists of the Los Angeles Club. These ideas are: 1. To pick them up as he goes, and he has to be sure that they are not lost. 2. To pick them up as he goes, and he has to be sure that they are not lost. 3. To pick them up as he goes, and he has to be sure that they are not lost.

colleagues appear in the making. They meet each other, get acquainted, seek out the artist in the exhibitions, and later at the teaching galleries and society. They compare notes and get enthusiastic and the result is the formation of a colored class of amateur buyers, who come with satisfaction and who ultimately become collectors, often of the best and choicest works of art.

Then, of similar educational value are the "thumb box" exhibitions, of which the Salinas Club, so far as I know, is the originator. The club has established a venue and its exhibition of sketches by artist members is anticipated each year by scores of amateurs. Each artist member is allowed to show four sketches, six by six inches (or about 11" being the size limit. Nearly 100 are often sold, even in dull times, at an average price of $15, the range being from $10 and $10 to $100 and over. Many persons come from distant points to obtain these sketches. A wide range of choice is possible with 400 examples shown.

There again is an opportunity for the development of junior art patrons, who grow up to be amateurs and collectors. The "thumb box" exhibitions afford an opportunity for a boy or girl actually to possess meritorious works at modest prices, thus stimulating a taste for art by the joy of possession.

"American art is coming into its own, and with it an art appreciation by the American people that is certain to result in a higher standard of taste and culture for the nation. Art clubs and art societies can do much to develop this appreciation by putting into practice the 'Salinas Club' idea."

EXPERIMENTAL LOVE IS OUT.

Too Many Amateur Romeos, Nowadays, Says Marie.

Marriage and Stardom Don't Mix, She Declares.

Star Declares She'd Rather Emote Than Comedy.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

"Of course, I'll admit that it's nonsense for any girl who is supposed to be grown up to say that she has never been kissed. Romance is a part of every girl's life, and she's bound to think that some man she meets when she's in her teens is the Prince Charming. But then, as far as I'm concerned, I think that experimental love is an indulgence that indicates a weak mind."

We were discussing the story of "Kismet," Marie Prevost and myself. It is by Arthur Somers Roche, you may recall, and it is being made by Miss Prevost as one of her starring features for Universal.

In the film story, the heroine had never been kissed in her life. At a masked ball a man grabs her with his arms about her neck and presses his lips to hers. That kiss ignites romance in the girl's heart, and the plot is concerned with her

Marries and Recovers in This Version.

A delightful comedy from the pen of Mary Roberts Rinehart, author of "The Hat" and other great successes, will be presented at the California Theater for a week, beginning today.

The story's local is a hospital; the heroine a sympathetic probationer; and the hero a private patient, whom the doctors give but a few hours to live, and who therefore insists upon marrying his nurse and leaving all his wealth to her, just to cheat a lot of gramping relatives. But, as it happens, he doesn't die, and when he gets well he assigns himself the arduous task of wooing his wife. This is a bare outline of "The Glorious Fool."

Given Richard Dix as the man who does the wooing and Helene Chadwick as the girl who is the wooed, one may expect a delightful combination of comedy and heart-interest, especially with the famous Mrs. Rinehart as the originator of the situations. Both Miss Chadwick and Mr. Dix have ap-

Career of Stanley is Varied One.

Typical of the energy and eagerness which characterize the achievements of most successful American artists is the career of Helen Stanley, soprano, who will appear in recital at the Auditorium next Thursday evening.

Miss Stanley is a native of Chicago, where at one time she was the youngest church soloist in that city. Later came the opportunity for study abroad, and during three seasons there she sang twenty-one different leading roles, each in its original language.

Her operatic debut in America was made in the role of Prince Charming in Massenet's "Cendrillon," after having coached with the composer, in which she won immediate success.

She has since appeared with the Chicago Opera Company, Montreal company, and the Elsie-Parker organization, in which last she was a featured star with Farrar. Miss Stanley's greatest virtue in this country, however, is in concert

These magic spells of Harold Lloyd. He puts them on and you are in the comedy world and you are serious.

When they are off, he looks into a camera and becomes a gay, carefree boy.

The humor of the pictures is a young man in various comic situations. The Harold Lloyd film is a smiling youth who has a steady grin on his face most of the time.

At the Harold Lloyd, almost his personal motto is that people are not to be taken too seriously. It is in fact, as different in him as possible from his comedy. People do not recognize the reality, meeting him for

A MARITAL COMPLEX.

With the opening performance of "Scrambled Wives" at the Morosco Theater this afternoon, local theater-goers will have the opportunity to see what is said to be as good a farce comedy as has been produced locally within the last ten years.

It is from the pens of Adelaide Matthews and Martha M. Stanley, who already have several other comedy hits to their credit. The plot of "Scrambled Wives" turns on a perfectly natural series of circumstances and complications at a week-end house party. To this house party goes Lucille, the daughter of the host, for the purpose of inspecting the man she considers a desirable matrimonial prospect. Arriving, she finds that her divorced husband has his extremely jealous new wife in tow.

As if this were not bad enough, it develops that friend former husband has an unimpaired propensity for making conversational blunders, though his intentions are always of the best. And in addition to the chaos of the situation, there is also present a woman who knows all about the past of the principals, and does not hesitate to tell it.

Faced by this formidable combination, Lucille feigns illness, and resorts to all sorts of desperate schemes to save her face. The final unwinding of the plot is unexpected and amusing, but must be seen and heard to be appreciated.

In the cast are Bessie Elyon, Gayne Whitman, Julia Blane, Harry Garrity, Joseph Bell, Grace Benham, Joseph Egerton and other Morosco favorites. Indications are that "Scrambled Wives" will go over with a bang, for it is pure fun from start to finish, and its points are within the grasp of every one.

INGENUE IN WESTERNA.

Josephine Hill has been engaged to do ingenue leads in a series of twelve five-reel western dramas. Miss Hill will be directed by Fred Caldwell. Director Fred Caldwell is now shooting the "Dominating Eyes," which is the third of a series of twelve five-reel western dramas to be released through the Affiliated Picture Enterprises. Josephine Hill is doing the leads.

peared together in a number of pictures and each understands the other's method of acting so well that their screen union is one of the most perfect imaginable.

The sympathetic little nurse, the rich patient, she marries to prevent his despair, the head nurse, the "dummy," the head intern, the ward—every detail is said to be true to life, and in addition to the leading players, the cast includes Otto Hoffman, Kate Lester, Theodore Von Eltz, Frederick Vroom, John Lince, Vera Lewis, Lillian Langdon and George Cooper.

A delightful musical program by Elinor's orchestra accompanies the feature picture, and the program also includes the three-day popular concert by the organization of fifty artists. The latest in comedy, news and novelty reels are also part of the program.

VIOLETTIST ACTIVE.

Leona Noblett, violinist, assisted by Leontine Raden, mezzo-soprano, and Marjorie Hicks, pianist, gave a program at Orndorff on Monday afternoon. Miss Noblett was also the soloist this month with the California Theater Orchestra. In San Francisco, playing the Naxos, she has been scheduled to appear as soloist before many clubs and high schools in California.

discovery of who the Prince Charming is. During the course of her search, she is several times kissed by various amateur and professional love-makers.

I confess that personally I was rather amazed at Miss Prevost's outspoken attitude on the subject of young love, and said as much. "Oh, don't get the idea that I'm preaching," she answered with decision. "I'm very practical about all of it. I simply think that nine-tenths of experimental love, as you call it, is a waste of time."

"Of course, I'll admit that any girl is susceptible to a fellow's attentions, as they call it, but then that's because nine out of ten girls haven't enough to do."

"The case of the heroine I'm playing is different. She was eloped with by her mother. Her marriage was made for her in advance by her parents. She didn't think that she cared for the man she was engaged to because he was too much absorbed in business affairs. She didn't care to be kissed because she had been trained differently. She was taught to disdain the attention of men, unless it was the man she was to marry. Romance, when it did come to her, arrived as a shock surprise. She was swept off her feet. And, of Anthem" will, we suspect, rest upon your view of the younger generation. Somehow or other we believe younger generations are always said to be going to ruin—and we personally have little fears of the present-day Sappers, despite the menace of the "National Anthem."

This Scandal Got Started in Bohemia.

No one ever heard of a scandal in Bohemia, but when a daughter of conventional society paid a visit to that ephemeral land, scandal started and provided a theme and a name for Cosmo Hamilton's comedy, "Scandal," which enters its third week at the Majestic Theater this afternoon. The play is repeating the success here that it met with when first presented in New York and will, no doubt, prove one of the most popular ever presented at this house.

There is both comedy and drama in the story of the girl who claims to be married to a man in order to save herself from explaining to her narrow-minded relatives why she visits a certain artist's Bohemian studio at late hours in the night. Like a good sport the man permits her to get away with the statement, and everything goes along smoothly for her until it comes time to retire. Naturally complications follow, both humorous and dramatic, and lead up to a splendid scene between the principals, Mary Newcomb and Edward Everett Horton.

DRAMA SECTION OF GAMUT IN PLAYS.

After a lapse of several months, the Gamut Club's dramatic section will get into action again next Wednesday night, following the monthly dinner and musical program, the latter being under the direction of Hans R. Linn. Three one-act plays will be presented featuring such well-known persons as Melbourne MacDowell, Dan Crimmins and Rosa Gore, of Orpheum fame. Repeatedly in the past the club has been urged to open its presentations to the public, and this privilege will be accorded Wednesday night.

Edward Everett Horton, who is adding new popularity to his record here in "Scandal," at the Majestic.

WON'T DEFINE HAYS'S DUTIES.

(Continued from 27th Page.) Night," received rather humorous attention from the critics. The silk-De Mille seems to be slipping as our luxurious lord of the photoplay. Maybe the European trip will help.

INGRAM'S LATEST. Rex Ingram's "Turn to the Right" has opened for a Broadway run which we anticipate, will not be long. Ingram is not at home with hokum and much of "Turn to the Right" is as awful in a comedy way as "Way Down East." But never does it approach the punch of the Griffith melange of greatness and frightfulness. Ingram does not seem to be able to build drama.

Neither he is more concerned with getting a series of fetching pictures. Yet "Turn to the Right" got by the New York critics pretty well. Frank Mayo and Jack Mulhall are in town. Mrs. Mayo (Dagmar Godowsky) making the trip ahead of her husband. Betty Blythe is back from New Orleans, where the exteriors of a new Rex Beach picture were shot. Next week she begins a series of personal appearances.

WILL ROGERS FILM AT DE LUXE TODAY.

Edward E. Kilder's "A Poor Relation," one of the most popular comedies ever written, has at last found its way to the screen in the latest starring vehicle for Will Rogers. The picture, which, as a play, made the late Sol Smith Russell famous, will be shown at the De Luxe Theater for three days, beginning today.

Will Rogers impersonates the philosopher-inventor, Noah Vale, and gives one of the superlative performances of his career. This character has been played for nearly every noteworthy character actor, and there are few stock companies that have not presented "A Poor Relation" in its stage version. An unusually fine cast, headed by Sylvia Breamer, supports Will Rogers. The young hero is played by Wallace MacDonald, who during the making of the picture, absented himself long enough to marry Doris May. Sydney Ainsworth, one of the most charming personalities in filmdom, as usual impersonates a witty and oily villain. Molly Malone, Little Robert De Vilbiss and Jeanette Trebaol are the boy and girl members of the cast.

Will Rogers, who gives human portrayal of character in "A Poor Relation," showing at the De Luxe.

EXPERIMENTAL LOVE IS OUT.

course, it turns out that the man who did the sweeping was the one she was to marry.

"The story says she had never been kissed and I believe it in her instance, but that was an exceptional case. It isn't the case of the average girl, because she isn't watched that closely.

"I think that every girl should have something to occupy her mind, and then she'll have the right perspective on romance. She won't make it paramount.

"The trouble is there are too many amateur Romeos hanging around nowadays. Unless a girl has her mind working along practical lines, she'll find that she can't tell what's worth while from what isn't. I don't say that she should marry the first man of class that she meets, but I do say that she shouldn't waste her time with the trash.

"She should, at least, show the same discrimination and care in picking a man that she would in choosing a hat, and many girls do. Good men are scarce, yes, but that's only because the girls have spoiled them. They've made loafers of a lot of men just by being too sweet to them."

WILL MARRY—EVENTUALLY.

"In my own instance, I've always figured that I would get married some day. I don't want to die an old maid, of course. But I'm not going to be married for quite a while. I don't think that any picture star should until she's had a fling at a career. It's too hard on the husband."

"The salary of a girl star in the films is generally much greater than the one that her husband can make. Nothing that he does will be quite up to her taste, unless she's a very sensible girl, and even then there's a certain friction on account of money matters and the demands on her time.

"When I feel that I've gone as far as I want to in pictures, then I'll think about marrying. Meanwhile, I'm going to keep right on working full speed."

You know, of course, that she was one of the most celebrated if not the most celebrated of the Mack Sennett bathing girls. She is regarded as a well-nigh perfect example of refined attractions, as they are recognized at the motion-picture comedy studios. Dark hair, blue eyes, beautifully-formed as to body, and possessed of a somewhat sweet unaffectedness of manner, she has made an appeal that is at once very real and at the same time very elusively poignant and charming.

STORES BATHING APPAREL.

The bathing suit she now wants to make a thing of the past. She has stored all her most alluring seaside garb in a trunk where she keeps mementoes of her film career, and she isn't going to bring this garb out again unless she can't possibly avoid it.

"I simply don't want to be the same thing all the time," continued Miss Prevost. "I want to prove that I'm not just a type, but that I can do things. It's for that reason that I like stories that are different. It's what I'm always asking for at the studio. And my chief trouble in life is getting the sort of story that I want."

That's the trouble with nine-tenths of the picture people at present, but Miss Prevost seems to succeed better than a great majority. One of her films, "Don't Get Personal" is to show at the Superba Theater today. Her pictures make no attempt at solving any large problems, but they seem to average good entertainment.

"And that means, of course, that you eliminate all romance from your life," I queried.

"Well," she smiled. "It occurred to me just then that I had heard rumors of Miss Prevost being engaged, and though these were somewhat discredited by her statement about not wanting to get married, I felt that whenever she considered that her career was at the proper stage of its development there would be plenty of aspirants for her hand."

For the present, however, I determined that she has no intention of forsaking the home which she has made with her mother and sister, Marjorie, who is also in the films. She's aiming for the very top notch of success, and she wants to go a lot further in doing this than her present efforts in comedy.

WOULD EMOTE.

"In fact, I don't want to play comedy," said Miss Prevost. "It's just been my misfortune that because I received my preliminary training in pictures at Sennett's I've become established as a comedienne. What I want to do is drama and emotional work. And I want to do this on the screen. I haven't the least ambition to set on the stage, simply because I don't think that I could do it."

Whether she wants it or not, the result is in favor of the comedienne she has lately been making. They have established her as one of Universal's brightest stars, and have shown that she has a real acting ability as well as the faculty, previously proven, of looking rather entrancing in a bathing suit.

HAROLD LLOYD

many and many a time with a view to finding out what they think of his work—what they like and what they dislike about it. The system is a good one. Judging from results, as Lloyd is now one of the two or three at-the-very-top comedians.

LONESOME DAYS.
"Yes, lately I've been fortunate in what I have overheard about myself," said Lloyd. "But when I was playing Lonesome Luke—well, I felt pretty lonesome sometimes on overbearing people's remarks! I want to forget that phase of my career!"

Harold Lloyd has a personality much like that of Charlie Chaplin, except for Charlie's moodiness. He is reserved and shy with strangers. Just as Chaplin is, but when he knows people well, he likes to talk. He always keeps in a cheerful frame of mind, and never lets nerves get the best of him.

"You simply mustn't take life too seriously," he said whimsically. "Even if you are a comedian!" Like the kid he is, he adores practical joking.

Harold Lloyd is a guest at his new house the other evening. I was greeted by his brother, Gaylord Lloyd, for Harold doesn't fool around much with butlers except in his comedies. Somebody was playing the piano when I entered.

"Who was that playing?" I demanded. "Oh, it was I!" answered Harold with a grin. I congratulated him on his accomplishment. The music had really been beautiful, and I hadn't known he played so well. He let me rave on.

Then he said, "I'll play something for you now!" "Oh, do!" I gushed.

THE LLOYD JAZZ.
He reached into a cabinet, pulled out a roller and adjusted it to the piano.

It is such a very excellent mechanical piano that Lloyd has a lot of fun with it in that way. All his records are high-class, too. He dislikes jazz, except to dance to.

The comedian has lately bought a house and is making it all over. Also he bought the large lot next door, and is turning it into a swimming pool and garden. The place is in the select residential part of Los Angeles, but is unpretentious compared to many of the dwellings around it.

The Lloyd's house is really homey to the last degree. You might just expect this comedian to spend the rest of his days there, judging from his enthusiasm about improving it, and the atmosphere of comfort it gives out.

There's a room which is being beautifully fitted up. It's on the second floor, and it looks like a bride's bower if ever a room did. But Harold Lloyd swears it's being fitted merely as a dressing-room for the young ladies who attend his parties.

"I'm not going to be married, at least for a while," declared Lloyd. Harold was once engaged to Bebe Daniels, when she was his leading woman. Nobody knows just what broke the engagement. He and Bebe are still great friends.

"Oh, yes," he says smilingly. "I shall get married some time. I don't want to die a bachelor. My ideal wife? Well, she should be either tall or short, blond or brunette, plump or slim. She should be vivacious or quiet, a sportswoman or a homemaker. She may be a professional or a nonprofessional. She may play the piano or confine her performance to the cook stove. You see I'm not a bit hard to please!"

Oh, no, of course not! Just first catch your Harold, that's all! He has an odd system with the ladies, too. At least he says he has. He declares that he always tells the truth about things to the young ladies to whom he is attentive.

"Even if I think they may not like the truth, I tell it anyhow. And really, I'm sure to keep out of hot water that way." That shows both how brave and charming he is. Imagine telling a girl the truth and getting away with it!

"Bebe and I used to have 'word of honor' parties," he said. "We'd never dream of telling each other an untruth as long as these lasted." Wonder if that's the reason they didn't get married!

NOT BUTTERFLY.
Harold's girl friends now are Marie Mosquini and Mildred Davis. He's not a bit of a he-vamp or a male butterfly, and keeps his women friends as well as his men friends and associates.

Lloyd makes lasting friends both professionally and socially. The boys at the studio have been with him for years. One old schoolmate of his now owns a grocery store. Harold often goes down and hobnobs with him, sitting on a cracker box. And they also go fishing and hiking together.

Another boyhood friend of his is in the Navy, and whenever this one is ashore at Los Angeles, he and Harold renew old times by swimming and dining together. Perhaps that's how he captured the inspiration for "The Sailor-Made Man" now showing at the Symphony Theater. No matter.

Several members of Harold's family live with him, including his brother and his brother's wife. Lately there has been a new arrival—a baby nephew, who has been named for the comedian, and never was babe more worshipped by a doting uncle.

Harold insisted on a Christmas tree for the two-week old baby, and one of the presents for the husky infant was nothing less than a pair of boxing gloves. Harold is a great chum with both his father and mother. He takes his mother out to theaters and cafes.

SECRET OF HIS YOUTH.

Eddie Foy Keeps Young by Growing Up With Family.

You might think Eddie Foy would be hardly the same chap today as when he used to sing for wicked cow-punchers at Dodge City, and coax the nickels from the rounders about St. Joe; but he is, just the same, and the secret of his perennial youthfulness he says is the fact that he always associates with people younger than himself.

Speaking of the little Foy's he says: "What chance have I to get old with a gang like that around me? My oldest boy, Bryan, is a man now—shaves, votes and everything; so I pick the next oldest, and so on down the step ladder. By the time the baby, Irving, is grown up, I shall probably be ready to retire. But that is a long way off yet."

"Tris Frigama says the same thing. The only difference between her and me is that she associates with strangers, and I with my own family. She is as young today as she was twenty-five years ago, and so am I—at least, I can't see any difference. Anyway, what's the use of borrowing trouble? These things take care of themselves; and by the time I really do begin to age, they'll probably have found a new kind of gland, and I can begin over again."

Harold Lloyd is very frank about himself. He takes care of my mail, and used to answer my mash notes romantically, but it got me into too much trouble. Now he merely sends a picture.

So even wild comedians receive mash notes! Harold is very frank about himself. "No, I've never done much reading in my life," he told me. "I don't seem ever to have time. I seem always to have been working to earn my living. There are a lot of books that I mean to read some time."

But Lloyd always has time for a fad of his—solving puzzles and judging from his enthusiasm about solving them. He can't rest until he works out a puzzle, and often sits up nearly all night when he is puzzling. In order to figure out some particularly perplexing puzzle, he and Max Linder, another parlor-trick hound, have magic contests that hold out some times almost until dawn.

Lloyd is a sociable sort of an individual. Though he hates fishing, and usually falls asleep in the boat during the process, he often goes on fishing trips with friends. One night he went on an all-night fishing trip at Los Angeles Harbor.

And the only kick I got out of the trip was seeing a wooden-legged man walk a railroad "restle," he said. "I'm going to put that into a picture some time."

COMEDY SPOOLS STEPS.
He likes to dance, but he says he's a bad dancing partner and gets all out of step if a comedy idea happens to strike him in the middle of a dance. That's one reason he likes going always with the same young ladies, who understand his moods and don't mind being deserted, mentally at least, while he goes idea-hunting.

He likes camping trips, too, that is, comfortable ones, with a servant along to do the cooking and dish-washing.

"No," he smiled at my question. "I can't cook—outside of pictures!" Harold's kindness extends to always insisting on having a tree for Christmas. That's partly because once when he was a little fellow, the family, which had always had a tree, was too poor to purchase one. He wept himself to sleep. Ever since that time, no matter what happened, there was a Christmas tree in the house.

Halloween is another day Harold observes religiously. That is, if Halloween observance can ever be called religious. Last Halloween he and Mildred Davis and some others started out. But the joke turned rather on them the last house they visited. It was the home of Jean Haves, who writes gags and stories for Harold.

Just as they were about to soap the windows, in accordance with tradition, a watchman showed up around the corner. A member of the party was Harold's cameraman. He hadn't seen the watchman and kept right on soaping. While Harold, Mildred and the others left him to get pinched.

But lo, and behold, the watchman did no such thing. He just joined the cameraman in the soaping, leaving Harold, Mildred and the other deserters to watch with their teeth chattering, until they swallowed their pride and came sneaking back.

"AFRICANUS" STAYS.
Negro Drama Proves Novelty at Walker.

Played by an entire cast of colored actors, "Africanus," which for the past week has been running at the Walker Theater, has proved such a novelty in the local theatrical world that it has been decided to continue the run at this Grand-avenue playhouse for a second week.

The Memola Players, as the company at the Walker Theater are called, comprises a group of thirty talented negro actors, the pick of dramatic artists in the colored theatrical world. All of the performers have had previous stage experience, and they were selected for their roles in "Africanus" solely on their individual merits.

Frank Egan, producer of the show, is a well-known figure in local and national dramatic circles. In offering "Africanus" to the Los Angeles public, he believes he is meeting popular demand for something different in the manner of stage entertainment. Also Mr. Egan is interested in advancing the dramatic instinct in the negro, as a strong native ability for acting.

TACTICAL MOVE TO AID ORCHESTRA

Conductor, Rothwell to Adopt New Arrangement for Seating Musicians.

With a view of increasing the effectiveness of certain sections of the orchestra, and creating a more perfect cohesion, Walter Henry Rothwell, director of the Philharmonic, will today at the regular popular concert at the Auditorium institute a new seating arrangement. The plan is the outcome of long and serious study on Mr. Rothwell's part, and one of its principal features will be the bringing of the solo instruments of the woodwind section forward where they will be heard to better advantage in their more important passages.

"The conventional manner of seating a symphony orchestra with first violins on the left of the conductor and second violins on his right, has been followed for centuries," commented Mr. Rothwell yesterday.

"And yet every thoughtful conductor has been aware of vital defects in the ensemble of his band, which without question were the result of the wide separation of sections that should be closely allied."

"Reluctant to offend conventionalities, and seeing no better plan offered, he has continued the practice."

"The plan which we will follow today, perhaps permanently if the experiment is successful, simply throws the second violins back of the first violins on the conductor's left, draws the violas and cellos, which are both numerically weaker and musically more closely allied, to the front on the conductor's right, and allows the oboes and flutes, which are frequently called on for solo passages of the utmost delicacy, to occupy a place directly in front."

However, weaknesses may develop which we at present cannot foresee. Only a trial can prove the wisdom of it. The plan is not wholly original. Facilitates of some stages have forced similar changes in some cases.

"Indeed, I believe in Philadelphia, Leopold Stokowski had a somewhat similar seating arrangement in effect for some seasons, with excellent results."

"At any rate, it cannot help but accomplish a greater cohesion in the first and second violins, which formerly on opposite sides of the stage, were playing in unison, octave or harmony, exactly similar passages and having the utmost difficulty in keeping together."

Jules Lepake, violinist, is to be soloist on the popular program this afternoon.

"SHAME" HOLDS OVER AT MILLER'S.

In the picture appear Jack Gilbert, in a featured role; Doris Pawn, Anna May Wong, William V. Mong, George Siegmann and others.

HAVE WE PROGRESSED?

Monkeys are more sensitive in their feelings than humans, according to Jean Herschell of Benjamin B. Hampton's directorial staff, who is using a baby simian in Kane Grey's "Golden Dreams," which the Hampton organization is now producing at United studios.

The script calls for Bertalan Gray, playing the hero, to shove his cocoon into a box away from him several times rather roughly, and within a few seconds after he has done so it is necessary that Gray pick him up and pet him to show there are no hard feelings. Otherwise the monkey would never come near Gray again. This fact was not known when an earlier Hampton production was being made, and considerable time was lost and retakes made necessary when monkeys had to be changed in the middle of the picture because the first one had become so offended that he refused to act further.

The answer to "Where shall we go tonight?" especially if it's a night of the most direct fun, may be found at the Burbank Theater.

Why not try a musical comedy revue for a change? Not the type of revue that rushes through a conglomeration of rehearsed old-time shows, but the sort of musical entertainment that is refreshing because it is original and delicately worded, enacted by a competent cast of comedians assisted by a battery of beautiful dancers.

Musical comedy as presented by the Hi Jinks organization at the Burbank from week to week is just enough of an entertainment to convince the most skeptical that one does not have to depend upon a contribution to the lighter vein of recreation.

The Hi Jinks company boasts of Al and Loie Bridge, who in the new production which starts today have been given roles that should afford them an unlimited scope for their clever character work.

There are others in the cast, such as Jean Darby, Olga Brooks, Grace Jennings, Luther Yantis, the Kemball Four, the famous quartet, the Marten sisters, clever dancers, George Clark, character actor, and a number of others equally popular.

Then there is the beauty chorus of twenty-five tipplings, all guaranteed to be under 20, though if there is anything but investigation some might soon reach 21.

FILM PLAY DRAMATIC NOT LITERARY FORM.

SCENARIST SAYS WORDS MUST BE SYMBOLIZED IN ACTION.

"Symbolizing words" is the title of a new book by Clara Beranger, the author of "Humoresque," "Just Around the Corner" and other noted literary works.

That's Clara Beranger's answer to the question of how good scenarios are written. That she knows whereof she speaks is proved by the high praise won by "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and her more recent literary efforts in connection with William De Mille's production of "Miss Lulu Bett." Producer and scenarist are now collaborating in the production of "Bought and Paid For," a Paramount picture.

The secret of good pictures is to be found in the perfect substitution of symbols for words," Mrs. Beranger explained. "The spoken word is the property of the stage play; even the written word has very little place in the photoplay. But in the place of these words we must have the perfect symbols. Substituting symbols for words is a tremendously difficult task—one that requires imagination coupled with a dogged persistence that refuses to admit failure."

"Perhaps more than any other producer, William De Mille realizes the value of perfect symbolism on the screen. Subtitles—the use of the written word—are reduced to the minimum in a William De Mille picture. In their place are symbolic pictures."

"The photoplay is primarily pictorial and dramatic. In the past far too many pictures have been made without regard to these essentials. Many screen stories were, and still are, told in narrative form. And by the generous use of the written word in the task of placing this narrative on the screen has been simplified a thousand fold."

"Mr. De Mille is an exponent of the dramatic form of the photoplay. The really dramatic photoplay focuses down to almost as few episodes as a stage play contains acts. In this ideal photoplay each sequence of the story is an act. But to achieve this perfect form requires a thorough knowledge of drama and the generous use of symbols."

"There are numerous instances of symbolism in 'Miss Lulu Bett.' For instance, we told whole chapters of the story in a 'close-up' of a shapeless knitted bedroom slipper which dissolved into a trim evening slipper and then dissolved back into the original bedroom slipper. And again, wishing to emphasize Lulu's marriage, we used the simple device of a tag on the suitcase which she carried on her honeymoon. The tag bore her married name."

"HELEN'S A FIGHTER." Helen Ferguson, featured in "Hungry for Goldwyn," who just returned from the David Butler company from location, brought back the laurel wreath, because she had a real fight with the town's bully over a yellow dog. The pup began to pick him up and pet him to show there are no hard feelings. Otherwise the monkey would never come near Gray again. This fact was not known when an earlier Hampton production was being made, and considerable time was lost and retakes made necessary when monkeys had to be changed in the middle of the picture because the first one had become so offended that he refused to act further.

"MADNESS WITH METHOD." Here's a senseless sentence: "I accuse foolish ways of being just around the corner in Peacock Alley picking the peacock flower from the secret place in the Garden of Allah. For shame!"

Hope Hampton May Make Home in the West.

The more they try to make pictures in the East, the harder they fall for Los Angeles.

Evidence of this fact comes with the announcement that Hope Hampton leaves New York within the next few weeks for Hollywood.

Miss Hampton came here a year ago to make pictures. She was pleased with conditions, but business reasons forced her to return to the metropolis. Since her return there she has made but three pictures. "The Bait," filmed during her stay here, was completed in six weeks.

This fact, it is reported, is the main reason for her early return. She was not planning to come back here. It is understood that Miss Hampton may be permanently located here.

Several stories are under consideration for the first picture to be made here, but no definite announcement will be made until Miss Hampton's arrival.

Clarence Brown, formerly associate with Maurice Tourneur, is directing the star at present. Brown will come west and continue as director. He became associated with Miss Hampton when she was here last year making "The Bait," under the supervision of Tourneur.

The United Studios will probably house this new organization. "Stardust," Miss Hampton's latest contribution to the screen, opened at the Kinema Theater yesterday. It is an adaptation of the Fannie Hurst novel, by the same name. Hobart Hopper directed. James Rennie is leading man.

Mac Murray, Who is bedazzling large audiences in "Peacock Alley," which is in its second week at Loew's Theater.

"PEACOCK" GETS AN EXTENSION AT LOEW'S.

Those who were unable to see "Peacock Alley" last week will have another chance, according to duer.

"MAKING THE MOVIES" IS POPULAR SHOW.

Out in the center of the world every Tuesday is being given an opportunity to witness the making of real pictures by real actors. This project, started a month ago under the auspices of the Hollywood Post of the American Legion, has met with such popular reception that announcement has been made that this show of the "inside of the studio," will be continued indefinitely. The entertainment is being given at the Legion stadium, Hollywood Boulevard and El Centro streets.

Leading stars from various Hollywood studios have consented to appear at these performances. Tourists and others have an opportunity to watch their favorite performers before the cameras. The performance is under the direction of Clarka Irvine.

At Tuesday's show Anita Stewart will appear. A scene in the production now being filmed was shot with Miss Stewart in the leading role. Fifteen hundred spectators saw last Tuesday's performance in which Neal Evans and Josephine Hill featured.

Advance preparations are being made for filming "The Woman Breed," Pauline Frederick's next picture, following "The Glory of Clementine," from William J. Locke's novel of the same name. "The Woman Breed" is a picture-story laid in a European town on the border between Morocco and Algeria. It was written expressly for Miss Frederick by Louis Stevens. The African desert village in which much of the action takes place is now being designed.

The Small Investors Should BUY THIS STOCK

Co-operation is one of the reasons why we desire the theater-going public to be co-partners with us. The Los Angeles Theatres, Inc., is a California enterprise with a very low capitalization, organized and managed by experienced theater men for the purpose of building, leasing and operating new and modern theater, store and office buildings in Los Angeles and vicinity. Two of the company's desirable properties are under long-term lease and are nearing completion, while plans are being drawn for the third theater, store and office building.

Industrially and financially, we are a full-grown city, but our suburban theater development, with only a few new and modern theaters, has greatly lagged, being far behind any other city of its size.

An investment in this company gives you an opportunity to share in the substantial profits of the fourth industry in the United States, a chance to place your funds in a real and secure investment.

For a Limited Time We Offer The Unsold Portion of $75,000 Cumulative Participating Preferred Stock.
